—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 20.

WHAT IS going to happen to the railroads, with all their depression troubles, plus the competition of passenger omnibuses and freight trucks on the public highways?

Much has been heard from railroad men on the subject of "unfair automobile competition." They feel that competitive automobiles, taking advantage of "public highways that cost nothing," should be eliminated or controlled by government officials, friendly to railroads.

The railroads ask:

"How can we keep up our rights of way, expensive tracks, bridges, terminals, and compete with bus and truck lines that use free highways?"

AUTOMOBILE MEN might reply that in ancient days stage coaches had free highways, and the railroads, building their own trucks, not only competed with stage coaches, but destroyed them, because railroads offered something better.

If automobile buses and trucks have "something better" they will put railroads out of existence.

But, that will not happen because rights of way that railroads have established, their metal trackage, freedom from stops, have a value that cannot be estimated, one that properly used, freed from duplicated overhead and expensive competition among railroads themselves, will make roads infinitely more profitable than they ever have been.

Railroads must learn from automobile makers, and get rid at the same time of slow speed and outrageously heavy rolling stock. How can a railroad coach weighing 150,000 pounds, carrying 4,000 pounds of passengers, hope to compete with a light vehicle weighing 15,000 pounds, carrying 6,000 pounds of passengers?

THE SIDE of the railroads has been presented often. Railroad men and the general public will be interested in views of the motor industry, expressed in a letter to this writer by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors Corporation.

Of railroad-automobile competition, Mr. Sloan says:

"It involves the solvency of our railroad transportation system; involves through that an enormous amount of securities which are held by our financial institutions; it involves to an important extent the motor car industry; in other words, it involves some of our greatest and most important industries, and not only that—and perhaps more fundamentally — it involves the cost to the consumer of transporting people and merchandise; hence it is of more than academic interest to every one."

WHAT CAN be done about a new invention that supercedes an old idea, unless the old idea can bring itself up to date, is hard to say.

There was no way of protecting the old-fashioned needle from the sewing machine, the hand printer from the typesetting machine or the hand loom from modern textile machines.

Of the question under investigation Mr. Sloan writes:

"At the present time there is being carried on, as you know, a study into the question under the auspices of a commission headed by Ex-President Coolidge, of which Ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith and Bernard M. Baruch are members. This movement was started under the auspices of the American Investment Bankers' Association.

"There is a second movement, which I indirectly started, which consists of a joint conference of five important railroad presidents and five representative users of the highways, in which is represented the individual user, the truck operator, the bus operator, the farm group, etc."

MR. SLOAN says that the railroads, "through propaganda have to a considerable extent the sympathy of the public and are throttling the use of the highways, particularly by putting unreasonable restrictions on the use of the truck."

Speaking for the automobile makers and users, Mr. Sloan protests against excessive taxation of highway traffic and automobile power:

"Entirely aside from this, on account of the financial depression and the financial position of practically all the states and municipalities, a trend has come in to divert such things as gasoline taxes, which heretofore have been used exclusively for building and maintenance of our good road system, for general tax purposes.

"The federal government, as you know, has an excise tax of 1 cent a gallon on gasoline. What is really happening is that the cost of transportation on the highway, involving not only passengers but freight, is being increased and is being used as a source of ordinary taxation.

"The great trouble is that the influence of any tax, like the gasoline tax, is not appreciated by the people so far as its effect is concerned, and the result is that these taxes are rising all the time, and in some states have already reached the point of 8 cents or 9 cents per gallon."

Mr. Sloan, who realizes that railroads are absolutely necessary to the public service, pros-

COUNCILMEN SWING AX TO SLASH BUDGET

Payroll of Welfare Bureau Pared in Economy Drive

As Mayor Charles H. Kline today signed the 1933 city tax millage ordinance, City Council swung its economy scythe over the heads of 25 employes in the Department of Public Welfare, with a saving of $32,300.

Dr. J. S. Hammers, superintendent of the City Home and Hospital at Mayview, volunteered to cut 20 more jobs off that institution's payroll with a total saving of approximately $20,000.

Hammers later told newspapermen that only four of the 20 jobs are actually in effect at Mayview at present, the others having been eliminated last year, recently furloughed or let out. He said the payroll at Mayview today is $365,000. The Mayor's proposed budget had set up $454,000 for this purpose.

SEEKS MORE EMPLOYES

It developed Hammers is still asking for 18 more jobs on the home's payroll. Although he said today that only 365 are now on the payroll, the Mayor's original 1933 budget asked for 454 jobs. Hammers then agreed to cut 51 from this number, and today told Council he would cut 20 more, a total of 71 jobs.

The Bureau of the Handicapped was eliminated with the exception of a clerk, who was transferred to the general office of the department. A supervisor, a field worker and a stenographer must go to save $7,020. Two of the three jobs in the Mental Health Clinic were lopped off to save $5,280.

These cuts were made after Dr. Hammers, Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Department of Public Welfare, and Joseph I. McDonough, chief clerk in her department, appeared before Council to discuss the welfare budget.

Dr. Hammers offered a further cut of $5,000 in the supplies account of Mayview to bring its total down to $320,000. When President of Council John S. Herron asked him if he couldn't get along on $300,000 "if it were absolutely necessary," he replied:

"I think it could be done."

NEEDS HOOK AND LADDER

It was understood Herron was referring to the proposed elimination of nine engine houses. He added:

"Have you any particular preference. Do you want a hook and ladder?"

Hammers' answer was:

"We could use a small hook and ladder."

While Council deliberates cutting the budget to meet the reduced millage, a delegation of taxpayers is scheduled to appear before the Board of Public Education this afternoon to ask that the school tax millage set for 1933 be reconsidered. Delegations from the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League and the Oakland Board of Trade will be present, according to I. Leonard Aronson.

Harry Kamin and Titus Simms were appointed a committee to represent the Squirrel Hill Board of Trade at the school board meeting.

Kamin charged the board had reduced the budget without reducing the millage. Jacob Aronson, of the Oakland trade body, said school taxes had increased 60 per cent since 1923.

COURT UPHOLDS VERONA SUIT

Alderman John J. Verona, Hill political leader, won a preliminary victory today in his attempts to collect a $150,000 fee from F. F. Nicola's Schenley Farms Corporation for the sale of the Nicola site to the county for a Town Hall.

Judge William H. McNaugher refused the corporation's request to throw Verona's suit out of court. This paves the way for hearing of Verona's claim.

The court held that it was not necessary for Verona to hold a realtor's license in the deal, and that apparently he had been hired only as a promoter.

The corporation is also carrying on litigation to force the present County Commissioners to complete purchase of the site, which was authorized by the former Board of Commissioners.

ROOSEVELT SHUNS BID ON DEBTS

Hoover's Commission Plan Runs Into Major Snags

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—President Hoover's latest bid for international action on three fronts—war debts, a world economic conference, and disarmament—struck several major snags today.

Congress remained cold to his suggestion that a commission be set up to re-examine the war debt structure, while from Albany came reports that President-elect Roosevelt is not disposed to go along with Mr. Hoover's novel proposal that they jointly name an American commission or board to deal with the whole inter-related series of problems.

CONTACT MYSTERY

Whether there has been any direct contact between the President and the President-elect remained something of a mystery. Here in Washington that question was answered:

"You will have to ask Gov. Roosevelt."

In Albany, Gov. Roosevelt replied:

"You will have to ask Washington."

Under the circumstances, it was believed President Hoover's suggestion that they jointly name a continuing commission to deal with war debts and world economic problems was made without prior consultation with the President-elect, and that it probably surprised Gov. Roosevelt as much as it did members of Congress.

In any event, it appeared unlikely today that Mr. Hoover's proposals would get very far—unless he chooses to name such a commission on his own executive responsibility for what it might be able to accomplish in the 10 weeks of life that are left to his administration.

CONGRESS' REACTION

The reaction in Congress to the President's special message was mixed.

There was general approbation of that part of Mr. Hoover's message which declared against cancellation of the debts, or any re-

JUDGE HOLDS FATE OF TATES

Sentence of 'Bluebeard' Slayers to Be Given After Christmas

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 20.—Two mountaineer boys, Sam Tate, 15, and his brother, George, 19, who confessed ambushing and killing their father, Isley Tate, mountain czar, will spend Christmas in a Fayette County jail wondering if Judge S. John Morrow will send them to the electric chair.

The taking of testimony in the case was concluded today after the boys had heard their father termed a "Bluebeard" by one of their neighbors, strengthening the defense contention that Tate deserved the fate his two sons meted out to him on a mountain trail.

After Tate's widow, recalled to the stand, had testified there were at least five wives before she became Mrs. Tate, G. H. Kiersted, a neighbor of Tate's, said:

"He was a second Bluebeard."

CHILD VICTIM

Asked for an explanation, he said:

"There was a little girl in Isley's household they called Roddy. No one knew much about her. Isley was the cause of the girl's death. He attacked her when she was not more than 11 years old. While she was ill a man came in the night and mysteriously stole her away in her nightclothes. She died a short time later. I can tell you more if you want to hear it."

Several witnesses were called to establish the identity of "Roddy," but the state objected that it would only be hearsay testimony.

Mrs. Tate, at today's session, told of Tate ordering her to write a date in the family Bible that would have made her 10 years

LINK ROYALTY IN KAISER PLOT

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Reports that Heinrich Fuecker, recently arrested in a suspected plot against the life of former Kaiser Wilhelm, is of royal blood, are current in Holland, the London Daily Mail said today.

The paper added the official version of the plot against Wilhelm's life was considered a fabrication, and that the assault was attempted against the former ruler as the result of a quarrel over possible restoration of monarchy in Germany.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—The German government today issued a new decree, re-establishing freedom of the press and mitigating former decrees aimed at enforcement of political peace.

The decree abolished special political courts incorporated in the defense of the republic act, which expires December 31, and eliminated the clause which had banned the former Kaiser from Germany forever.

Monarchists, however, doubted this would cause him to return from Doorn. They recalled he recently said:

"I will not return to Germany unless the German people call me."

Leaps to Safety As Train Hits Auto

Irwin Tobe, 30, of 1113 Braddock avenue, Braddock, leaped from his automobile just in time to save himself as a Baltimore and Ohio Railroad freight train struck his automobile at the Sixth street crossing today.

Tobe's car skidded on the icy street as he noticed the train, according to Braddock police. He leaped and his car skidded directly in the path of the train and was badly damaged.

WETS, DRYS CLASH ON BREW

Modification Backers Push Decision by Christmas

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The fight for legalized beer opened in the House today with wets confident but anxious, and the drys promising a battle to the end against modification of the Volstead act.

Democratic leaders were hopeful they could settle the second prohibition issue in the present session in two days, freeing members from an atmosphere of bitterness over the rising holiday mood.

BRITTEN DOUBTS VETO

A prediction that President Hoover will not veto a beer bill if passed by this Congress was made during debate by Representative Fred Britten (Rep.), of Illinois. Asked for reasons for his prediction, Britten replied that he based it on a letter written by Mr. Hoover to Senator Sheppard in 1918 in which he declared it "mighty hard to get drunk on 2.75 beer."

When Representative Collier (Dem.), of Mississippi, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, called up the bill, galleries were filled.

As the debate began, Speaker Garner said he "expected some sort of a bill to pass."

Women drys kept up their fight as the House met. They distributed an "extra" sponsored by Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, of New York, calling on members to reject the beer bill.

FINAL VOTE NEAR

Representative Rainey (Rep.), of Illinois, opened debate for the bill on the theory that it is making good a promise of the Democratic national platform.

Explaining provisions of the bill, he cited testimony of Prof. Yandell Henderson, of Yale University, to the effect that light beer "is no more intoxicating than a cup of coffee or a cigar." Rainey said:

"It will yield an enormous amount of revenue."

He cited the Ways and Means Committee report that federal taxes may ultimately reach $300,000,000 a year from beer.

BEER AND JEFFERSON

Rainey said:

"Beer was first advocated in the United States by Thomas Jefferson. On his return from France he urged the making of beer to lessen the consumption of hard liquor. Beer making began in 1786, and it was not taxed for 20 years."

Representative Crowther (Rep.), of New York, the first speaker opposing the bill, ridiculed it from all angles and drew applause from the drys.

He said no one knows what revenue will be produced, but it is likely to be from $15,000,000 to $75,000,000 a year.

Crowther declared competent witnesses testified that 3.2 per cent beer is intoxicating in fact. He quoted Prof. Walter R. Miles, of Yale, as saying experiments showed that a mild quantity of 2.75 per cent beer slowed down an automobile driver's reactions two-fifths of a second.

CRASH INJURES 30 CHILDREN

DAYTON, O., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Thirty children en route to a consolidated school southwest of here were injured more or less seriously today when a school bus collided with an automobile driven by Albert Grubbs.

Robert Grubbs, riding with his father, suffered fractures of both legs, while Melvin Sears, 17, and George Smith, 12, Farmersville, pupils in the bus, suffered a fractured arm and leg, respectively. Others were cut and bruised.

Lawrence Kesling, 17, Farmersville, driver of the school bus, told officials that a heavy fog obscured his vision.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Mrs. Leah Alter, 34, of Pittsburgh, was among seven passengers cut and bruised when an Indian Coach Lines bus skidded off the icy highway near here today. None of the passengers were injured seriously, according to attaches of a Harrisburg hospital where they were treated.

'Other Man' Hits Raids On Peggy by Rich

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Jack De Ruyter, young and tall and dark and handsome, of Park avenue, named as co-respondent in the divorce suit brought by Freddie Rich, radio orchestra leader, against Peggy Lawton Rich, once of the "Follies," denied from the witness stand today that he was ever alone with Peggy in her suite in the Hotel St. Moritz.

Scoring two raids made during his visits to Peggy, De Ruyter declared there was always another man present when he went to see Mrs. Rich.

De Ruyter told of Rich and detectives sweeping into Peggy's apartment on May 13.

He said that Peggy had gone to bed in the next room, having said she was fatigued an hour before.

In the matter of a second raid in which the plaintiff charges the co-respondent and his wife were in a state of undress together, De Ruyter testified that Steinacher had left them only a few minutes before Rich and detectives broke in.

He admitted he had his coat off, but that was all.

Stork Near, Navy Flies Aid to Bleak Isle

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Crackling over the ether today came a brief and frantic message to the Coast Guard from the little short-wave station of the tiny group of lighthouse tenders on bleak Anacapa Island. The message read:

"Send a doctor. One of our women expectant mother. Very ill."

The huge forces of the United States Navy were mobilized at once to take aid to the mother, whose name was not given in the appeal for help.

Headquarters of the Eleventh Naval District, at San Diego, got busy. A big Navy airplane was ordered warmed up. A doctor from the naval hospital packed a kit of instruments and medicines, bundled up against the chill and sped to the airport.

Then came the drum of titan motors as science speeded to the aid of motherhood.

EXPERTS SCORE PUNISHMENT IN GEORGIA

Protests Pour in as Stage Is Set for Battle Tomorrow

International News Service.

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 20.—Present day punishment in Georgia is archaic.

This will be the defense presented in behalf of Robert Elliott Burns, fugitive from a Georgia chain gang, by an impressive array of legal talent which has banded together to fight his extradition to Georgia.

Former Judge Harry V. Osborn, of Newark, who today conferred with Gov. A. Harry Moore regarding the details of the Burns extradition hearing scheduled for tomorrow, outlined the stand of the defense. He said:

"We hope we have outlived the medieval system of vengeance. It is a little archaic to reap vengeance of this kind today."

LEGAL EXPERTS CONFER

A meeting was held in Newark last night to crystallize the plans of the lawyers who have interested themselves in the plight of the twice escaped fugitive. In addition to Osborn, others in attendance were Roger Baldwin, president of the Civil Liberties Union; Arthur Garfield Hayes, prominent New York attorney, and Charles Handler, attorney for Burns.

George Gordon Battle, famous criminal lawyer, also is interested in the case, Osborn said, and will attend tomorrow's hearing if he can leave a case he is now conducting.

From all parts of the country, telegrams and letters continued to pour in on Gov. Moore, urging him to refuse the request of Georgia authorities that Burns be sent back to complete a sentence imposed for a $4 holdup in Atlanta.

GEORGIA PUSHES FIGHT

At the same time, forces of Georgia justice began concentrating on New Jersey in a determined effort to bring about Burns' extradition.

From Atlanta, Assistant Attorney General John I. Kelly was en route to Trenton, to be present at the extradition hearing. Warden Harold Hardy, Jr., of the Troup County prison from which Burns fled, and R. D. Carter, Troup County police chief, both of whom came here last week, prepared to visit Trenton with official papers in the case.

And in New York, the question of whether Burns is wanted there on a forgery charge was to be settled, and prominent attorneys announced their intention to aid the chain gang fugitive.

Assistant District Attorney Harold Hastings, in New York, announced a decision was to be made today on whether New York will ask Burns' return there to face a charge of forging a $50 check in the name of a magazine editor for whom he worked.

McKee was about to leave for his office yesterday when Dr. C. C. Craven warned him exposure would likely bring on pneumonia, and directed him to remain home for the rest of the week.

perity and to industry, including his own industry, says:

"I am, of course, you might say, selfishly interested in protecting the highway user. That is true, in a way, but on the other hand I am equally interested in preserving in a sound way the very fine system of rail transportation that we now enjoy.

"Irrespective of what adjustment may be necessary between the highway and the rail, the service that we now enjoy on the rail is an indispensable agency in business and commerce."

DECLARING THAT it is "an uneconomic thing unduly to tax any agency of transportation," Mr. Sloan offers these suggestions:

"If an impartial, intelligent economic study was made of the situation the railroads would have to make some adjustment; such, for instance, as confining their activities more to long hauls, leaving the more flexible, more effective, more direct form of highway transportation for the short haul.

"I am not taking any position as to what should happen—I merely say that we should not subsidize any form of transportation, for by doing so we are increasing the cost to the consumer and we are simply delaying the time when further adjustments will have to be made.

"I am sure you will agree with me that when any new thing comes along it means progress if it is properly recognized. It should not be burdened with things which it economically cannot carry.

"Each thing should stand on its own foundation, and this is particularly true when it affects the cost of transportation which vitally affects our agricultural interests, which, we all know, are in a very sad state, and indirectly affects, although in a smaller way, everything that we eat or use."

THIS QUESTION of railroad and automobile competition, use of the highways, taxation of gasoline and automobiles, which are part of modern civilized life and comfort, is not a subject as amusing as the ordinary news of the day, but it is most important, involving the living plans and household budget of every family in America.

This column will be glad to publish the railroads' side of the question as extensively as Mr. Sloan has discussed the automobile side here.

Perhaps the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Sante Fe, Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, Rock Island, or some other Western railroad seriously affected by automobile competition would submit to the public a brief statement on the railroad side.

Railroads must be kept prosperous, for they are as important to the nation as the veins and arteries are to the body. The greatest recent human invention, the automobile, in all its forms must also be kept fully developed, and enabled without hindrance to offer the greatest possible service to all the people.

Mitchell Says Repeal Won't End Rackets

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Attorney General William D. Mitchell said last night abolition of prohibtion would remove an "alibi for crime," but would not eradicate the racketeer.

The cabinet member made the dedicatory address in the Municipal Auditorium, where St. Paul's new city hall and courthouse were formally presented to the city. He said liquor traffic constituted but one phase of racketeering which presents to municipalities a problem that cannot be solved merely by waiting for repeal of prohibition.

Cleveland Council Demands Dry Repeal

CLEVELAND, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The City Council last night suspended its rules and passed by acclamation a resolution calling for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and modification of the Volstead act at once to permit the sale of beer and light wines. It also requested the Ohio Legislature to repeal the state prohibition amendment and all enforcing laws.

CITY TO DROP 'PET' HORSES

Affection is not potent enough to keep horses on the city's budget, President of Council John S. Herron ruled at today's budget session. He ordered H. J. Neely, chief clerk in the Bureau of Highways and Sewers to:

"Take from the budget all the horses being kept for love and affection."

The order resulted from a discussion in which David McDonald, superintendent of the Division of Horses, and Neeley were asked why they had not got rid of 60 horses which they promised last year when 15 new trucks were purchased for the Highways Bureau.

McDonald championed the horses' cause with:

"The teams do more work than any truck. When you take the horses out of a department, the men quit work."

TATE BRANDED 'BLUEBEARD' BY NEIGHBOR

Hearing for 2 Boy Slayers Turns to Mystery Woman

older than she really is. She said she told him:

"I'll be d—d if I do."

DEFIES 'BAD MAN'

It was the first time she dared to disobey him, she said. Later, she said, she inserted the date he wanted.

At the completion of the hearing, the judge ordered counsel to file briefs as quickly as possible, and it is expected a sentence will be imposed after New Years.

In tones that echoed throughout the courtroom, Tate's widow and mother of his 13 children, declared at yesterday's session:

"He was a hard, cruel man and I don't blame the boys one bit."

Then she unfolded a dramatic story of her life with the mountaineer; how she and her mother each gave birth to a child to Isley within a 14-month period.

Her mother, Mrs. Adeline Show Miller, who resided a mile from the Tate home in Haydentown, Mrs. Tate said, worked for Tate, who then was a widower.

This arrangement continued for about a year when, according to Mrs. Tate, her mother planned to marry. Then little Nellie, only 14, was assigned to the task of Isley's housekeeper. She had been working in that capacity about a week, she testified, when Tate proposed marriage to her. She said:

"He convinced me that I would have a much happier life with him than at home. He proposed on a Thursday and on Sunday we came to Uniontown and were married."

MOTHER DIES

Four months after the wedding the widow said her mother gave birth to a child that died within a few hours. Mrs. Miller sacrificed her life also, as two days later she was a corpse.

According to Mrs. Tate, her mother, in her last words, named Isley Tate as the father of the baby.

Tate, his widow claimed, was a firm believer in the "rod." Her children, she said, were brought up to the tune of a huge blacksnake whip.

Many times it raised welts on the bodies of all her children and herself, she said. Occasionally Tate would discard the whip and beat the boys with a club studded with nails. He made a mark of George, the widow declared, because he branded him as the "black sheep."

Katherine Tate, 18, also testified. She said:

"I hated him and I know the others did, too. What should we like him for after all he did to us?"

Mother Has Son Arrested as Thief

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Mrs. Valeria Krol, 48, today turned over her only son, Stanley, 21, to police as a thief.

Waiting early this morning for her son to return, Mrs. Krol saw two men throw a bundle of clothes on the front porch of her house. Soon after, Stanley picked up the clothes and brought them into the home. He admitted, his mother said, it was holdup loot.

Suing for Divorce

MARGARET C. LEYDA . . . . . "BEHIND THE KITCHEN DOOR"

Mrs. Leyda, the radio actress who quarrels on the air nightly in WWSW's domestic skit, today suing for a divorce from Edgar J. Leyda, who promptly filed an answer to her suit and a cross-suit.

'KITCHEN DOOR' ACTRESS SUES

Margaret Cunningham Leyda, the radio star who quarrels nightly in the radio feature "Behind the Kitchen Door," has had quite a few quarrels with her real husband, it developed today.

On file in Common Pleas Court was her suit for divorce from Edgar J. Leyda, of Monongahela City.

And today Leyda not only denied all her charges but filed a counter suit in divorce.

In their 17 years of married life Leyda became drunk, swore at her, threw the salt and pepper shakers at her and accused her falsely of improper conduct, Mrs. Leyda complains.

Leyda retorts that her charges are false. He accuses her of improper conduct in his answer to her suit.

Cost of Crime In County Just 'Fixed Charge'

The County Commissioners today authorized the appropriation of $25,000 to pay witness fees and jurors in the courts after making pertinent comment on "fixed charges."

Controller Robert G. Woodside notified the Commissioners there isn't enough cash left to operate the courts. Commissioner C. C. McGovern said:

"This is no budget question. It is just the old basket where you can put in your hand and grab. We can't set a yearly price on crime. It's one of the fixed charges."

ENGINE CAPTIVE WHIRLED HOURS

OIL CITY, Pa., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—His clothing becoming entangled in the shaft of a gas engine, Lloyd Kiser was a prisoner of the machine for nearly three hours, and today lived to tell the tale. Several times he was carried around a high circle by a 10-inch belt. Each time his clothing was twisted tighter.

Then the engine stopped.

Kiser with difficulty took a knife from his pocket and cut through the belt and his clothing to free himself. He was nearly choked.

Crawling to his automobile, he drove half a mile to obtain aid. At a hospital his condition was said to be serious.

SEABURY WHIP HITS WALKER AND BETTY

Tammany, 2 Judges Also Flayed by Investigator

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The Seabury whip, which has whistled over the heads of officeholders more than two years cracked sharply again today with stinging lashes at former Mayor James J. Walker, Tammany Hall, two State Supreme Court justices, a borough president, a city commissioner, and even the actress, Betty Compton.

In a 140-page report, his second as a result of the Hofstadter Legislative Committee investigation, he summarized today the findings as concerned Walker under the heading:

"The series of sinister transactions with which former Mayor Walker was connected, which led to the filing of charges against him and his resignation pending the trial thereof, in order to avoid the removal which, on the evidence before the Governor, must of necessity have followed."

Seabury referred several times by name to Betty Compton, who sailed for Europe on the same boat with Walker and who has been his companion at several European resorts. Both are now abroad.

Setting forth that a check for $7,500, drawn against Mayor Walker's account, was paid to Betty Compton, and that securities totaling $41,668.83 also were paid to her from the account of Russell T. Sherwood, missing fiscal agent of Walker, Seabury said:

"No reason has been suggested why Sherwood, a $3,000-a-year accountant, should give Betty Compton securities in any such value. Nor has any reason been suggested why Sherwood, out of his own funds, should have put up some $16,500 which he delivered in cash in payment for a letter of credit in favor of Betty Compton."

There was likewise approval of Mr. Hoover's outlined policy of reopening the debt question only with "those nations who have sought to maintain their obligations to us."

This latter policy would definitely exclude France, since she is in default of $19,000,000, due on December 15, and over which Congress is seething beneath the surface.

On these two propositions, Congress generally approved Mr. Hoover's outline of policy. On the other suggestions contained in his message there was either marked division of opinion or outright hositlity.

Congress does not concede the necessity for such urgent action as the President recommended, nor, in fact, for tying up discussion of revising war debts with the proposed world economic conference and disarmament.

Numerous Senators and Representatives pointed out that no further payment on war debts is due before June 15, and they believe that the whole matter can very well be left until after March 4, to be dealt with by the new administration.

BRITAIN READY TO ACT

LONDON, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Great Britain is ready to dispatch a special mission to Washington at the earliest opportunity to take advantage of President Hoover's suggestion that the war debts be re-examined as an approach to currency stabilization, the foreign office informed International News Service today.

High officials made no secret of the fact they welcomed Mr. Hoover's proposal that a war debt review be granted, through an appropriate agency to those nations that had "sought to maintain their obligations."

Gold 'Grower' Jailed; Theft Charge Doubted

A young man whose ideas might upset the world if they were practicable was in jail today.

He is Richard A. Hartwell, 35, of the Argonne Hotel. He says he has a secret process by which he can make gold and platinum grow into more gold and more platinum.

But there are skeptics, including the city detectives who arrested Hartwell when he complained of being robbed. He said gold and platinum worth $13,368 was taken from his room.

In Central Police Court today the sleuths produced letters Hartwell said he had received from Congressmen, government officials and the German ambassador. The letters refused him help for his secret.

The detectives testified a typewriter which had been loaned to Hartwell was found pawned in his name. Hartwell had said the machine was stolen with the "gold."

Hartwell was held until the detectives talk with Dr. John S. Unger, of Carnegie Steel Company's research department, who has denied Hartwell's statement that he gave Hartwell the "gold."

Other persons told of listening to Hartwell's seemingly fantastic tales of his ability to increase the weight of gold and platinum by a secret chemical process. One of them reported checking back on numerous references given by Hartwell and finding that in most instances the persons whose names were used either did not know him or would not in any way indorse him.

Auto Tire Marks Give Chicken Thief Clue

Two county detectives are on the trail of 30 chickens with only the tire marks of an automobile as a clue. They set out today to track down the car in which the chickens were carried from A. B. Pheifer's chicken house, near Wexford, last night.

Records on Loans Show France Meant to Pay

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—At the time France began borrowing $2,997,477,800 in cash from the United States Treasury, her statesmen not only did not consider it a gift, nor "a contribution to the common cause," but actually contemplated paying it back in 15 to 25 years.

This was revealed today by examination of the records dealing with the loans to France.

In the report of the War Debt Funding Commission to Congress, dealing with the intent of the debtors, is the following:

"On April 5, 1917 (war was declared April 6) our ambassador (at Paris) was instructed at the instance of the Secretary of the Treasury to learn from the French Minister of Finance the amount of loan or credit that would most assist the French republic during the next six months. The ambassador immediately conferred with the French Premier, Ribot . . . and wired the Secretary of State on April 11, 1917:

"'The Premier personally expressed the hope to me that no resolution would be introduced or debated in Congress tending to make a gift to the government of France from the United States however much the sentiment of good will prompting it might be appreciated by the French people.'"

The report also contains copies of cable messages sent to his government by then Ambassador Jules Jusserand. One dated April 17 said:

"I shall do my best in the matter of repayment in 25 years, but I cannot refrain from pointing out how much things easier would have been made for me if, instead of speaking, as was done, in imprecise terms, in your telegram No. 536, of a term 'as long as possible,' the department had told me 25 years, since it had a settled idea on this subject.

"I believed I had good reason to suppose that 15 years would be considered satisfactory."

RECORDS TAKEN IN GUN DUEL HINT EXPOSE

'Al's Cousin Balked Trying to Eat Crime Evidence

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—Frank "The Enforcer" Nitti, one of the three leaders of the underworld kingdom of the imprisoned Al Capone, does not intend to die.

Brought to Bridewell Hospital after a gun duel with a detective in a Loop office building yesterday, Nitti moaned:

"Oh, God let me live! Oh, God let me live."

Today it appeared that the prayer had been answered. This ruthless hoodlum, who police say saw to it that the assassinations of the Capone mob were carried out, was on the road to recovery despite four bullets in his body.

LIKELY TO RECOVER

Supt. Edward J. Denemark, of the hospital announced:

"The doctors are of the opinion that Nitti will pull through."

The Capone organization moved swiftly today to free Nitti from police custody. Attorney Rocco De Stefano filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus with Chief Justice John J. Phystalski in Criminal Court.

Acting in behalf of Dr. Gaeteno Ronga, Nitti's father-in-law, De Stefano charged that Nitti is being detained illegally. Judge Prystalski said he would hear the petition this afternoon.

Petitions for writs filed in behalf of the six other hoodlum prisoners seized in the raid on the Nitti headquarters, also were to be heard this afternoon. Attaches of the state's attorney's office declared they would fight the writ to free Nitti by charging him with assault with intent to kill.

Nitti, nephew of the notorious "Scarface Al," was shot down while trying to swallow gang records during a raid on one of two known Loop headquarters of the Capone mob.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, who spent the night scrutinizing the records, declared one list the most comprehensive ever wrested from gangland.

EXPOSE LOOMS

Out of the shooting there grew a structure of evidence which may result in a series of raids and exposure unprecedented in Chicago's history. In that damp wad of paper which detectives pulled out of Nitti's mouth while his wounds were still fresh and in those lists discovered in the office where the guns blared, may repose hitherto undreamed-of secrets of the powerful Capone syndicate.

And these secrets, once exposed, may furnish the information enabling Mayor Anton J. Cermak to let fall the master stroke in his war of extermination on the city's organized hoodlums

The scrap of paper which Nitti tried to swallow just before he was shot down by Detective Sergeant Harry Lang was being scrutinized by experts of Northwestern University's crime detection laboratory. The lists and records found in the raided office were subjected to the examination of police after Mayor Cermak himself had studied them.

NURSE EXPLAINS MISTAKE FATAL TO 3 BABIES

Prosecutor to Renew Probe Into Giving Wrong Medicine

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Nora Georgia Paulson, 28, the nurse whose mistake in preparing a solution, authorities said, led to the death of three babies in New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, today was awaiting further questioning by Assistant District Attorney Saul Price.

Price, who said he planned to question Miss Paulson further tomorrow, quoted her as saying yesterday that when she went to the closet where solutions were kept she found she could not open the door completely and reached in and took a bottle, thinking it was the right one.

Later it was discovered the bottle contained a boric acid solution instead of the saline solution prescribed.

The three babies became ill after the injection was administered Thursday and Miss Paulson summoned a physician, Price said.

Two of the babies died Saturday and the third Sunday.

Price said Miss Paulson told him she was born in Austin, Minn., and was graduated from St. Mary's School of Nursing at Rochester, Minn., in 1926.

Price said his future action would be governed by the inquiry he is conducting.

HEART-BROKEN, SCOTTI TO QUIT OPERA STAGE

'Best Loved Villain,' Friend of Caruso Retiring Over Age

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Antonio Scotti, who knows what it is to be pelted with roses 12 whole minutes, also knows now what it is to be heart-broken.

The best loved of operatic villains, dean of the singers at the Metropolitan Opera Company, announced last night that on January 20 he will make his final appearance on the same stage where he made his local debut 33 years ago.

Scotti, who is 66, said:

"I am an old man. It breaks my heart, but I want to retire in time; retire before I break up."

FRIEND OF CARUSO

He was the closest friend of Enrico Caruso. They had twin suites in the old Knickerbocker Hotel in Times Square. Later, when Caruso was desperately ill, Scotti would rush from a performance to the bedside without taking his makeup off, and spend whole days there.

One of his memories is the gala performance of "Tosca" in 1924 when the city celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary with the "Met." The audience showered him with roses during a 12-minute ovation, and the Mayor gave him the flag of the city.

For his farewell Scotti will sing his favorite role, the sinister Chim-Fen, the opium den proprietor in Franco Leoni's "L'Oracolo." Then he will go back to his native Naples, where the people have never heard him sing.

'TOO SEVERE TO TEACH'

He frowned when somebody asked him if he would become a teacher. He said:

"No, I am too severe. I have heard too many great singers."

One night stands out above all others for him. That was in 1898 when he, Giulio Gatti-Casazza and Arturo Toscanini made joint debuts in La Scala at Milan. He sang the leading role in "Die Meistersinger."

Verdi and Wagner are his idols. He says:

"Ah, the two gods of opera—Verdi and Wagner."

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20.—(Universal.)—Edward F. Cavanaugh and William J. Connor, both 20, were sentenced to 18 months in McNeil Island Penitentiary by Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick after pleading guilty to a Dyer act indictment.

The youths admitted driving a stolen car from Pittsburgh to Culver City.

Judge McCormick said he could not give Cavanaugh permission, as requested, to marry Mabel Hurlston, of Homewood, Pittsburgh, who accompanied the defendants to Culver City.

The court was informed the defendants had originally been arrested by the chief of police at Newton, Kan., but "kidnaped" him on the way back to Pennsylvania, stole his badge, gun and money and locked him up in an abandoned cabin.

HOLIDAY DELAYS KILLER'S DOOM

HARRISBURG, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—An execution will not mar the New Years Day celebration for inmates of Rockview Penitentiary, regardless of the State Pardon Board's action on the application for commutation of the death sentence of Joseph Hudock, condemned Luzerne County slayer.

Hudock is under sentence to be electrocuted during the week of January 2. His attorneys are to appear before the Pardon Board to seek commutation to life imprisonment.

Warden Ashe, of the penitentiary, here last night for a Welfare Department party, said Hudock may die any day except Monday during the week of January 2 if his appeal is denied.

The warden added that the exact date of the execution has not been set, and that prisoners in the penitentiary, as in other penal institutions, will celebrate the New Year January 2.

The girl, a graduate of an exclusive academy here, had been shot three times. Amato had a bullet wound in his head and a revolver clutched in his hand. In Amato's pockets were found notes from Miss Farrell. In one she wrote:

"I believe we had better part and find happiness some other place. Because someone is getting in hot water and it is getting hotter each day. So, dear, I am writing this for the last time. The nights are still lonesome and the days are full of sunshine."

"I get more kick out of giving to these kids than from anything I receive."

Shaw was assisted by Beatrice Doran, employe of a neighborhood store.

Syria Shrine's Santa was to visit the boys and girls at the School for the Blind this afternoon, following a Christmas program of a two-act play and choral and orchestral selections.

TRIAL FOR GUY IN YACHT DEATH

LONG BEACH, Cal., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Involved by circumstantial evidence, William James (Curly) Guy, 24-year-old Welsh adventurer, will face trial in Superior Court on a charge of murdering Capt. Walter Wanderwell. The globe-trotter and explorer was shot to death the night of December 5 in the unlighted cabin of his yacht Carma.

Cuthbert Wills, chief engineer of the yacht, and Miss Marian Smith, of Rockmart, Ga., positively identified Guy, who has insisted he spent the night in the Glendale home of Edward De Larm, an aviator.

Mrs. Aloha Wanderwell testified Guy and De Larm threatened her husband last August. When she widow left the witness stand she shook hands with the accused.

Learns English Serving 'Life' for Alimony

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Mrs. Mary Politano must show cause why her husband "must be a prisoner for life" in a Brooklyn jail just because he is unable to pay $12 a week alimony.

Supreme Court Justice Edward Riegelman listened to the story of Umberto Politano, the imprisoned husband, yesterday and then issued the order.

Politano told the court:

"I have been in this jail for two and a half years, and each day my sentence becomes longer. I want a chance to get out so I can get a job and obey the court order. Must I be a prisoner for life?"

Politano said he came to this country in 1931 and had $3,000 in the bank when he married. Trouble started, he said, when the wife's family came to live with them. The $3,000 soon was eaten up, and the wife got a separation decree and the alimony order in 1929. Since then Politano has been in jail, unable to pay. He said:

"I've been in this jail longer than anyone else. I have even learned to read and write English while here."

Thomas' 10 Best Words Cover Globe, End in Beer

Ispahan is the tongue-twister in the list of Lowell Thomas' 10 most beautiful and euphonious words in the English tongue.

During a week-end visit here the famous globe-trotter took a few minutes to write out his selection. His 10 words take one to every point of the globe.

Wilfrid J. Funk, poet and publisher, started compiling lists of the words a week ago. Thomas' list is strikingly different from those of Rupert Hughes, Edwin Markham, Theodore Dreiser, Judge Frank P. Patterson and others in the word game. His selections are as follows:

Samarkand	Punkarino
Finnegan	Shwe-dagon
Zanzibar	Bambino
Palooka	Rajputana
Ispahan	Budweiser

When Thomas completed his list he said:

"I think that this trying to pick the most beautiful 10 words is all a lot of nonsense but it is also good comedy."

Samarkand takes one to Turkestan, Zanzibar takes you to the east coast of Africa. Ispahan is one of the ancient great cities in Persia, Rajputana is a province in Northwest India and Shwedagon is the best-known Buddhist shrine in the world and is located at Rangoon, Burma, Thomas explained.

Budweiser, the tenth word in the list, carries one back—back to the days before prohibition.

Well, Folks, we'll leave it to YOU: WHO brought down the price of Turkeys in Pittsburgh

Donahoe's Policy:

a square deal for the Public ALL the time! Not "some" of the time . . .

Always remember, there is no hedging—no waiting—no delay at Donahoe's when the market drops, but

VALUES THAT ARE IN STEP WITH THE NEW TEMPO OF BUSINESS—AT THE PROPER TIME—NOT MANY DAYS LATER

Donahoe's modern merchandising methods bring you foods that are priced in keeping with the times—at the proper time.

FACTS about turkey prices

For Thanksgiving the leading brands of turkeys sold at 32c a pound retail. Immediately after Thanksgiving, due to a surplus of live turkeys, the turkey market dropped; Donahoe's AT ONCE ordered turkeys from their shipper, passed the decline along to the Public by dropping the price to 25c a pound and for three weeks sold turkeys, thousands of them, at the low price of 25c a pound.

No other store in Pittsburgh gave the public the advantage of this after-Thanksgiving decline—no other store in Pittsburgh helped to move the immense turkey crop from producer to consumer—no other store in Pittsburgh advertised turkeys at the price at which the Public was entitled to buy—you can check the Pittsburgh newspapers for three weeks after Thanksgiving and you will not find a single advertisement, except Donahoe's, actually selling turkey at the new low price warranted by the market decline caused by enormous crop of turkeys on hand.

Monday, December 12th, the turkey situation reached its climax—we contracted for 15,000 head of turkeys at the lowest price in 30 years—and we IMMEDIATELY, at ONCE passed a NEW LOW PRICE on to the Public, with a guarantee against price advance and price decline—our newspaper advertisement of December 13th—the turkey advertisement that made history and created a furore in the turkey business, told the story.

Donahoe's LEAD—

Others Follow

Donahoe's brought down the price of turkeys at the proper time, and now others—weeks after our first price drop, days after our second price drop—have desperately lowered prices in a frantic effort to regain trade and good will that has been lost by a high-price policy.

In such stores you pay a high price for many days—a low price for a few days. Donahoe's live up to their policy by giving the Public the RIGHT price at the RIGHT time.

What About the College Man?

Presidents of American universities and colleges and the heads of the nation's great industrial employers of man power have answered this all-important question for the Sun-Telegraph. The third and last of these remarkable articles is presented today.

THOUSANDS OF YOUNG men and women are graduated every year by universities and colleges, the beneficiaries of a superior general education.

In view of existing economic conditions, has there been, or is there likely to be an overproduction?

Seeking the viewpoint of the heads of the educational institutions themselves and of industrial leaders to whom employment is a serious problem, the editor asked opinions from those most important throughout the nation.

The editor of the Sun-Telegraph in letters to the educators and industrial leaders wrote:

Assuming that the depression has made jobs of every description, particularly the so-called white collar jobs, very scarce, what is going to become of the flood of young men who graduate in 1933 from the American universities? Many avenues of employment are now either closed entirely or greatly restricted. Under the circumstances, of what value is a superior general education? Does it not rather unfit the American youth to face such emergency conditions as now exist?

Or do you think a general education may be an advantage no matter what class of work the graduated student may be compelled to undertake?

Do you think there should be an official restriction of the size of the student body for the year 1933-34, or do you favor continuing on present lines?

ECONOMIC conditions do necessitate consideration of the quantity graduate production of colleges, Dr. Walter Dill Scott, PH. D., LL. D., president of Northwestern University, believes. He expresses his opinion as follows:

"My Dear Sir:

"A world-wide economic depression such as the present one does emphasize the necessity of knowing what is to become of all our graduates.

"An over supply in any particular professional or any particular vocation should be carefully avoided. It is quite possible that too many young men and women are attending certain classes of institutions. Young men and women who possess high character and pleasing personalities would always be sought in the various fields of human activity. The better such persons are trained, the better it will be for them and for the progress of civilization.

"We could quickly develop an over supply of trained young men and women if training was narrowly vocational. We are not likely to have an over supply of high-grade young men and women who have been taught the fundamentals of our civilization, and who are ready to begin to serve and to learn in almost any field of human endeavor."

ALL THE ability and all the altruism that can be mustered is necessary to civilization, in the opinion of Dr. Edward Charles Elliott, PH. D., LL. D., president of Purdue University at Lafayette, Ind. He states:

"My Dear Sir:

"I wish I knew the answers to the far-reaching questions presented in your letter. Frankly, I do not. However, I am risking this comment.

"In spite of all that has happened, and is likely to happen in the immediate future, I am not ready to accept any defeatist policy for higher education. While, in view of diminished incomes, it may be necessary for all institutions to limit the number of students, I have the conviction that it is our solemn responsibility to keep hold of as many of our youth as possible who give promise of that intellectual ability that will be needed even more in the next generation than it has been in the past.

"Granted that the economic opportunities for the trained individual are tragically few for the moment, is it not self-evident that whatever be the state of our civilization, we shall need all of the ability and all of the altruism that can be mustered?

"I recognize that this is not a very clear nor a very satisfactory reply. In other words though, I am in favor of going ahead more vigorously with our educational programs than ever before. We may have a lot of disagreeable things to learn. Therefore, let us learn these."

THE REV. R. M. KELLY, S. J., president of Loyola University, calls the questions asked of the educators very pertinent. He says:

"Dear Sir:

"You have put three pertinent and timely questions to us educators. It appears to me that all your questions assume that the main purpose of school education is to obtain employment; that you have in mind chiefly the dollars and cents value of education. If I admitted this assumption, I should say that there was overproduction in our field, and that, like other industries, we had better limit production or close down until the demand for our product picked up.

"However, if I may write frankly, I think that such an assumption is a complete misunderstanding of the aim and scope of general education. You will wish me, I am sure, to make clear what I mean by general education.

"The three types of school education are these: First, there is an education pointed to a particular purpose to prepare a student for a definite vocation. He is studying to be a lawyer, for example, or a business man or an engineer. This kind of education I would call vocational.

"There is also a type of education confined to a few gifted individuals which again has a well-defined objective, namely, to discover new truths or facts. This is called education for research.

"Thirdly, there is an education not designed directly to enable a man to make a livelihood, but aims to cultivate and develop, in a well-balanced way, the faculties of an individual, especially the intellectual faculty, the mind. This type of education endeavors to aid a man to realize some of his inexhaustible possibilities. It is called by various names: general as opposed to particular, liberal as opposed to servile, or suited to a slave; cultural as opposed to barbarous, connoting refinement and control.

"Cardinal Newman, in his masterful book on education, 'The Idea of a University,' states that the object of such an education is 'to open the mind, to correct it, to refine it, to enable it to know, and to digest, master, rule, and use its knowledge, to give it power over its own faculties, application, flexibility, method, critical exactness, sagacity, resource, address, eloquent expression.'

"In my view, the explanation of general education is its justification. General or cultural training is a boon in hard times as well as in prosperous times. It makes man more of a man; it rids him of narrowness and prejudice; it expands his mental horizon; it inspires him to do something with his talent. This explains the honor in which the truly educated man has always been held. It explains, too, why great leadership requires not only native talent, but well-developed intelligence.

"The daily press recently carried a news item which strongly confirmed the need and value of general as contrasted with a strictly technical education. The Armour Institute of Technology of this city, according to the press reports, had appointed a committee to investigate the results of the education which they were giving at this well-known institution. The committee had interviews with representatives of 60 nationally-known industries who employed Armour graduates. The unanimous opinion of these representatives was that most specialized knowledge was not used by the graduate. That the greatest need was to give their students a general education to develop in them the ability to think independently and to express their thoughts clearly and forcefully in English."

At nineteen cents a pound these super quality birds will take wings and literally fly into Pittsburgh homes. We cannot buy Puritan Turkeys in just any market, at any time. FORMER PAGE AIDING COX

There's an odd story in every man in the breadline at Old St. Patrick's and a story of human interest behind nearly every one of the otherwise unemployed who serve the meals to the hungry men in this long line.

It's hard to believe, yet it is a fact that there is one man dishing out soup in this kitchen who at one time counted statesmen, high government officials, diplomats and senators as his friends. It is some years ago that this unfortunate man had this distinction, but for 15 years he was a page in the United States Senate.

And now he's dishing out soup.

This, in brief, is only one story of the many that can be found among the hundreds who depend upon Father Cox for their daily bread. All of these men want work. In this crowd there are "white collar" men and skilled mechanics and Father Cox will be glad to hear from anybody who can use their services.

And, by the way, Father Cox gets a liberal cash commission on every Sun-Telegraph subscription that comes in on the blank on this page. This subscription drive is meeting with gratifying success and Father Cox has already been given several substantial checks for his unemployment relief fund. He looks upon every blank turned in this week as a special, personal Christmas greeting card.

FIVE-DAY WEEK FOR PRINTERS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 20.—(INS.)—The International Typographical Union will inaugurate the five-day week on January 1, 1933, as the result of the overwhelming adoption of an amendment to the union's constitution to the effect, voted on December 7, Woodruff Randolph, international secretary-treasurer of the union announced here today.

The final official vote on the five-day week was 32,073 for it and 18,010 against it, Randolph said.

Every union printer on all American and Canadian newspapers will employ a substitute one day a week beginning with the week of January 1, Randolph said, adding:

"It means that every union printer in the land is giving up an average of $8 a week, or about $35 a month for the benefit of his unemployed fellow worker."

About 35,000 union printers on newspapers will be affected immediately by the new law, Randolph stated. About 35,000 more printers employed in commercial printing houses and shops eventually will be affected.

WATER RIGHTS OF N. Y. UPHELD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Canada will accept a reservation to the St. Lawrence waterway treaty safeguarding the rights of New York state against power diversion by the Aluminum Company of America, Assistant Secretary of State James Grafton Rogers declared today at Senate hearings on the waterway project. He explained:

"The Canadian government has indicated it looks upon this proposed reservation as an American domestic question."

The New York Power Authority has demanded that the reservation be attached to the treaty, noting the existing language might be construed as a perpetual grant of more than 100,000 continuous horsepower to the Mellon concern. The latter has constructed a power diversion canal at Massena, N. Y., in the international rapids section.

Have you solved it yet? If you did, write the Cipher Editor.

By KENNETH A. NAGEL
Cipher Editor.

Is Cipher No. 28 proving hard for you? If it is, the Cipher Editor will give you a tip that may help.

The key word to this simple transposition cipher is "Washington." That should make it easy for you. Let's hope it didn't keep you awake last night.

"Bogie" has finally mastered it after three full hours. Can you beat his time?

In the mail are letters from James A. R. Rich, of Oil City, Pa.; W. J. Hastings, of Coraopolis, Pa., and Albert Leach, of Westwood, Pa. All say they have solved the ciphers rather easily.

Original ciphers were received from the following: Alfred D. Reid, of 324 Fourth avenue; Malcolm Nevins, of New Kensington, Pa., Walter J. Crilley, of Belle Vernon, Pa., and Steven Muzik, of McKees Rocke, Pa.

From Mrs. J. W. Daniels, of Wilkinsburg, comes a word of praise for the ciphers appearing in the Sun-Telegraph. She says:

"A few days ago I started working the ciphers and they are great, from now on you can expect me to be a regular fan."

Kingdom Bid Too High, 5 Cents Buys Horse

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The Monarch who cried, "My kingdom for a horse" could have driven a much better bargain in Chambersburg where one animal brought 5 cents at a sheriff's sale.

Settlements are being terminated this week on executions against the estate of Frank B. Statler, to whom the horse belonged.

A deb for every day is this week's gala record, and some are being presented at teas and some at dances and more elaborate affairs. Making her formal bow to society today is Margaret Meanor, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Meanor, of Sewickley.

Margaret is being presented at a tea being given by her mother in her home at 4 o'clock this afternoon. The decorations are very simple, and the bud is wearing a smart afternoon frock of beige crepe. Aiding her are her cousin, Elizabeth Wilde, Christine Bradshaw, of Beaver; Betty Shaw, Dorothy Baxter, Anne Wehr, Elizabeth Rodgers Craig, Margaret Miller, Peggy Leiper, Peggy Hamilton and Nancy and Louise Lippincott.

Another morning musicale is scheduled for Thursday, at 11:30 o'clock in the Hotel Schenley, when Samuel di Primio, tenor, will sing, under the direction of Miss Hulda Lefridge.

Morning Musicale

Patronesses include Mrs. John Nelson, Mrs. Jacob Payton, Mrs. David Demaree, Mrs. David I. McCahill, Mrs. Edward Tabor, Miss May Beegle and Mrs. Maurice Falk.

The junior Louis Ellsworth Laflins, of Lake Forest, Ill., are arriving Saturday to spend a week with Mrs. Laflin's parents, the John McCartney Kennedys, of Bigelow boulevard. Mrs. Laflin was June Kennedy before her wedding in June.

* * *

These home debut teas are charming, aren't they? They have such a gracious, friendly air. And with Christmas so near, the decorations are lovely.

Bows to Society

And smilax and holly and hemlock entwined the stairway and mistletoe and holly decked the mantel in the reception hall.

Pouring were three cousins of the debutante, Mrs. Stanley Brown, Mrs. Edwin Ruffin and Mrs. J. T. Mitchie.

The debutante's twin brother, Stirling Murray Rust, Jr., will be home from Lehigh, where he's studying engineering.

Added to the holiday festivities will be a dinner-dance Thomas A. Mellon will give December 29, at the Pittsburgh Club for Nancy Byers, Patsy Mellon and Laura Childs, three attractive debutantes.

Mellon Dance

Before the rag and tatters ball in the Edgeworth Club Thursday night, there'll be a Dutch treat dinner. On the committee are Susan O'Neil, Virginia Doyle, Katherine Collin, Laura Childs, Peggy Griffiths, Bertha Brooks, J. Conway Macon, Jr., Charles J. Ramsburg, Jr., Charles A. Woods, Jr., and Marshall Hamilton.

Nancy Chess, daughter of Mrs. Harvey B. Chess; Louise MacDonald, daughter of Mrs. Joseph H. Bialas, and Louise Snowdon are home from Rosemary Hall.

White Favored By Capital Leaders

WASHINGTON.—It's going to be a white Christmas, so far as the most dazzling of the dresses are concerned.

That was made clear at the White House when this season's most brilliant reception saw silver-haired Mrs. Hoover, half of the wives of the cabinet, many of the women of the diplomatic corps, and guests galore gowned in white.

So superb was Mrs. Hoover's gown of eggshell satin, with square-cut neck, close-fitting bodice, sleeves puffed to the elbow, and full and slightly trailing skirt, that many of her guests expressed a hope it would be her choice for a place in the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Hoover soon will make her decision on the gown, worn at some White House state function and representative of its period, which she will contribute to the collection of the gowns of presidents' wives.

Certainly the shimmering satin was "representative" of a social scene where jewels and feathers and sequins and orchids accented the beauty of white and where those who had happened to choose colors didn't feel "out in the cold," but were more vivid by contrast.

Mrs. Stimson's white was satin, made fluffy about the throat, with the palest of pink feather boas. Statuesque, golden-haired Mrs. Burley's had a belt of gold, a shoulder boa of curling white coque feathers which also made a suggestion of sleeves. Brunette Mrs. Mills, small and girlishly slender, chose figure-moulding matelasse, worn with diamond tera. Tall, dark-haired Mrs. Chapin wore satin in long and graceful Grecian lines. Mrs. Doak was fluffily feminine in white chiffon, with scarf fox-bordered.

The white gown of Mme. Claudel, doyen of the diplomatic corps as wife of the French Ambassador, was deeply hemmed in brown fur. She wore a diamond tiara. White velvet was chosen by Countess Szechenyi, the former Gladys Vanderbilt, as background for the shimmer of diamond pendant, earrings and bodice ornament.

Rochester Women Bring Gifts For Home

A fine collection of gifts for the New Brighton Home for the Aged were brought to yesterday's meeting of the Rochester Woman's Club yesterday. The members met in their accustomed place, the Veterans of Foreign Wars Home, with Mrs. George Schlelein in the chair. There was music, both assembly caroling and solos by Mrs. Osceola Stevenson Bruce, accompanied by Mrs. Mabel Goodman Moore. Mrs. Charles M. Bregg, club editor of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, spoke on "My Christmas Tree of Memory" and prior to the meeting Mrs. M. Lowrie McCandless, of the program committee, entertained at an informal luncheon in her home.

Gossipy Chat

By NANCY JANE

Olive June Lacey, Chicago soprano, who will sing with the Mendelssohn choir tonight in Carnegie Music Hall, and who will be the house guest of Mrs. Beulah Taylor Marston during her stay here, as a child craved attending a concert or grand opera as much as most young folks do a circus.

When she was 13, she happened, while downtown in Chicago on a Saturday afternoon, to see a notice of a grand opera performance she had long yearned to hear. It was being given that very afternoon.

But she had only her carfare. Her father was a stern man who counted his pennies carefully. She recalled that he had charge accounts at several of the big department stores. She had an idea. She went to the cashier's office of one of these and asked the cashier if he would let her have $2 for an opera ticket, and charge it to her father's account.

The cashier chuckled, asked a few more questions, and the deal was closed.

After the opera, she went home, worrying about what her father would do and say when she told her story.

But instead of an angry irate father, she found an amused one. He even went so far as to call her "rather resourceful."

She never tried the system again, however. Years later her mother told her that her father had been so amused at the incident that he called on the cashier to thank him, and gave him a cigar!

Mrs. W. H. R. Hilliard has four very rare trees on her place in Homewood avenue—larches. They look like evergreens, but are soft and fuzzy. Scotland and Scandinavia boast of many of them.

Petite, brunette Mrs. W. L. Mellon, Jr., has succumbed, I hear, to that revived diversion, knitting.

Marion G. Rand Names Jan. 14 For Wedding

Added to the already lengthy list of January brides, is Miss Marion Gwladys Rand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Rand, of Sewickley, who has chosen the fourteenth day of that month as the date for her marriage to Robert John Ritchey II, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds D. Ritchey, also of Sewickley.

The ceremony will take place at high noon in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Sewickley, with Dean Francis J. M. Cotter as the officiant.

Dr. Roselli Gives Talk At 20th Century Club

The Adriatic was described as a typical Italian sea with "a feminine type of mind" by Dr. Bruno Roselli, whose lecture yesterday morning on "Art Along the Adriatic" before the Twentieth Century Club was a delightful thing. Dr. Roselli, who occupies the chair of Italian literature at Vassar, illustrated his talk with some particularly fine slides, beginning his word and picture travels at the extreme heel of the Italian boot.

Many pictures showed the destruction of Italian art by Hungary during the World War and also the infinite care and expense to which the Italians went to protect their art treasures.

Panhellenic Delegates From Pitt Announced

Red, Green Passe In Christmas Decorations

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Stop and cogitate before you dress up your Christmas evergreen tree in the traditional red and green. It's passe.

So at least says Dudley Craft Watson, lecturer for the Art Institute. He said he was weary of the red and green motif and something ought to be done to create a new and modernistic Yule decoration.

Watson suggests white and silver Christmas trees.

EVER-CHANGING HAT FASHIONS ALLOW MANY VARIED DESIGNS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, Dec. 20.—Hat fashions, in Paris, continue to change from week to week. For the first time in a good many years, Paris has not for months decided on any one hat as the one to set all other styles; women may continue to wear big hats, little hats, hats straight on the head and hats tilted over one ear—any kind of hat they like—and still not be out of the running among French styles.

MOLYNEUX, WHO adds hats to each's season's collections of dresses and coats, is one of the designers who goes in for all types of hats. For tailored costumes, the Molyneux hat is brimmed and tailored; for afternoon clothes, it is more fanciful and shows touches of trimming. He insists on neither the straight-across-the-brows position for hats, or for any defined tilt.

* * *

AT BRUYERE'S, hats are likewise varied. One of the successes of the winter season is the Bruyere broad-brimmed hat with a pinch at the front of the crown—a hat which may be worn any number of ways. One sees it worn by French women at all angles. Bruyere also continues to do the small cap-like hat, which fits the head closely and is worn pushed off the brows.

Children Guests Of Juniors in Wilkinsburg

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Every one of the 70 children at the Wilkinsburg Juniors' party yesterday had such a glorious time that a similar affair has already been spoken of for next year. The party was held in the Y. W. C. A. Community House, each junior bringing either her own pre-school child or a guest—there are about 50 "sub-juniors" in the Wilkinsburg club.

And the party wasn't all for the little guests, either, for each one contributed a gift of fruit for the Wilkinsburg Baby Clinic and when it was taken by the little donors to the front of the room it more than filled a gaily-trimmed bushel basket. There was a delightful program, planned with regard to the ages of the little folk, who sat in a ring and helped Mrs. R. A. Dunlevy sing and go through hand exercises and listened to Miss Olivia Naly tell a Christmas story. Then there was a Christmas movie and later on Santa (Robert Carmack) came in with his sleigh bells and gifts. Even the refreshments were made especially simple and wholesome by Mrs. J. R. Wylie and her aides.

IDA M. TARBELL :-: Names of 12 Greatest Women Broadcast :-: ON AIR TONIGHT

'Deep River' Band Back On Radio

A roll call of the 12 greatest American women of the last 100 years, as determined by a nation-wide poll taken by the National Council of Women in connection with an essay contest, is to be announced over a nation-wide NBC-WJZ network including KDKA tonight at 10 o'clock. One of the judges, probably Ida M. Tarbell, historian, will reveal the results of the poll, tabulations of which indicate that probably six of the "greatest American women" of the last century are living today.

Miss Tarbell

Willard Robison, "evangelist of rhythm," with his famous "crooning" Deep River Orchestra augmented by a choir and special artists, returns to NBC networks for a new series of weekly programs, inaugurated over NBC-KDKA at 9:30 o'clock tonight. With Lee Wiley, blues singer, and Pauline Alpert, pianist, as soloists, Robison will feature spirituals, blues of the Southland and American ballads.

Lilyan Ariel, Russian-born concert pianist of KHJ, key station of Columbia's Don Lee Unit, plays Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" when she appears as guest soloist with Raymond Paige and his orchestra during "California Melodies" over CBS-WJAS tonight at 9:30.

Program Pointers

Paul Althouse, noted operatic and concert star, appears as guest soloist with Joseph Bonime's Symphony Orchestra over WJAS at 10 tonight as this week's "Five Star Theater" concert guest . . . Musical Memories, celebrating its one hundredth broadcast on KDKA at 9 tonight, is a "home made" affair, a major portion of the program featuring compositions by members of the orchestra . . . Mr. Althouse and production staff and Conductor Josef Koestner. Edgar A. Guest, poet, assumes the role of master of ceremonies, and Jane Froman appears as Koestner's guest.

The Boys' Choir of St. Thomas' Church, New York, augments the usual setup of the "Threads of Happiness" program which features Tommy McLaughlin, baritone, and a 45-piece symphony orchestra under the direction of Andre Kostelanetz for a special holiday program at 9:15 on WJAS tonight.

Seibel Discusses Theater Tonight

A quarter-hour of comedy with Uncle Bob and Betty as they peruse the Sun-Telegraph "funnies" is listed on WCAE at 6 p. m.

Speaking from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms, Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, flashes the latest news to WCAE and WJAS listeners at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m.

Globe-Trotting

With the Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen!

Some few weeks ago this broadcasting through print was inaugurated as a special department to chronicle the events of interest to the Globe Trotters who listen in to the broadcasts through the air. Every globe trotter who has some thought to convey to his listening brothers or sisters has the full use of this space to do it. In other words, this is your opportunity to broadcast. It is not very practicable yet to install microphones in your homes.

In spite of the many good-humored jibes about the repeated mention of birds and the query whether this is another Audubon Society or not, we still receive suggestions as to the care of the ornithological family. Jean Murphy, of Republic, who evidently doesn't think much of the Globe Trotter's idea of adding alcohol to the bird's water to keep it from freezing, puts an electric lamp in a pan, then places another container over that with water. This not only keeps the water from freezing but conveniently furnishes warm water for bathing. On warm days it would make a turkish bath. (Did I forget to mention that the lamp must be turned on).

It seems that some of the anonymous correspondents are not at all as enthusiastic about bird welfare as they once were. One reports that ever since he started putting crumbs out on his windowsill he gets such a flock chirping and chattering at the crack of dawn that his morning sleep has been spoiled. Now he demands that I do something about it.

Agnes Stroster, of Penn, believes that all the Westmoreland County birds congregate in her backyard at 7 o'clock each morning and do they howl if there is not enough food! Ask Agnes. She's glad to oblige and only asks them to be patient.

* * *

Add to your list of strange stories the mystery of the beans in the flower pot as related by Eleanor Toniolo, of Grapeville. She had visions of another jack and the bean stalk when she spied the familiar vegetable growth in her mother's favorite potted plant. All she can figure out is that when her string of beads broke she picked up several beads and tossed them into the flower pot. She has her doubts now about her jeweler.

Listening In On Radio Gossip

Betty Barthell (her name used to be Elizabeth, but she shortened it the other day to a 13-letter monicker) is one of radio's happiest girls right now . . . because what had promised to be a bad, mad day for her all of a sudden became one of the best she's ever known. Having decided that, career or no career, she was going to spend Christmas at her Dixie home, she made reservations for the first train to the Southland—scheduled to leave 10 minutes after her broadcast. In packing, she broke a mirror—which was bad . . . and then, after her broadcast, a program director took her arm and murmured something about an audition, Betty being "No. 13." Minus music and musicians, and in a hurry, she went into the audition room, sang—and missed her train . . . but that doesn't matter, because she'll star as the Chesterfield vocalist with Comedians Tom Howard and George Shelton, replacing Jeannie Lang, who was previously listed for the new series.

Eunice Howard, NBC actress, calls attention to a bit of news which appeared in the papers recently. It told about a wealthy woman who left her estate to a relative named Marie and to a dog and cat named Peanut and Red respectively. Eunice, who played "Marie" in the "Hello, Marie" sketches, says she once received a fan letter from the woman . . . and the names of two other characters in the air feature were "Peanut" and "Red."

Records? . . . Lois Miller, KDKA's "Morning Cheer" songbird, has sung 228 selections during 21 of her present series of programs without repeating a single song . . . and Happy Jack Turner, NBC pianist, once played for 2½ hours in a marathon broadcast without a single repetition, entirely from memory . . . and was still going strong when the broadcast ended.

DOUG RETURNS WITH 2 TIGERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—If a leech hadn't bit him right when he was pulling the trigger, Doug Fairbanks might have shot that porcupine. But the leech did, and the bounding hero of the flickers flinched—so he missed the porcupine and shot a deer.

It all happened in Indo-China, Doug recounted when he came in with a party of friends, Hollywood-bound for Christmas, on the French liner Champlain. He managed to get two tigers on his hunting trip and their hides, he figures, will make a marvelous cot for the lady of the mansion on the hill overlooking Los Angeles.

Lady Millicent Hawes, of England, dowager Duchess of Sutherland and one of Mary Pickford's closest friends, was also aboard, Hollywood bound too, to spend Christmas with Mrs. Fairbanks.

Charles Lewis and J. Allen Boone, two of Fairbanks' Hollywood friends, completed the party.

Mary was to have joined them in Switzerland, but her picture schedule prevented that, so all of them, as long as Mary couldn't come to them, decided to go to Mary.

MAN DIES, GIRL HURT COASTING

A Banning man was dead today and a Homestead girl injured in coasting accidents as winter continued its grip upon the Pittsburgh district.

Rising temperatures today and tomorrow were forecast for Pittsburgh to break the five-day-old cold wave.

Thrown from his sled while coasting near his home at Banning, Harvey Weaver, 25, died early today in Mercy Hospital of a fractured skull, according to a report to the Coroner.

Veronica Swatko, 11, of 216 Fifth avenue, Homestead, suffered a fractured right ankle when her sled crashed into another in West street near her home, according to a report at the Homestead Hospital.

He was a member of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church. He leaves his wife, three sons, Prescott, Wayne and Arthur; a daughter, Miss Florence; two brothers, Felix and Edward, of Butler, Pa.; a sister, Mrs. Stella Koontz, and two grandchildren.

William McG. Cole Services Tonight

Interment will be in Chartiers Cemetery tomorrow morning. He was born at Mt. Jackson, Pa., and was in the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad 52 years, retiring eight years ago. He was a member of the Carnegie Methodist Episcopal Church and Centennial Lodge, F. & A. M. Besides his widow he leaves two sons, E. W., of North Carolina, and Dr. Joseph H. Cole, of Rosslyn Farms, and two daughters, Mrs. Feickton, of Cleveland, and Mrs. S. M. Black, at home.

THE STORE OF PRACTICAL CHRISTMAS GIFTS

MISSION'S NEED OF TOYS FOR NEEDY GROWS

Increased demand for toys was reported today at the Toy Mission, Wood street and First avenue, with Christmas drawing closer and children in destitute homes depending on generosity of public-spirited citizens to make the Yuletide cheerful.

While the public's response has gratified the workers, who volunteer their services, this year's demand has been double that of former seasons. Especially are toys for boys and girls between 12 and 14 needed, according to George L. Bond, director.

Lauding the generosity of many persons who, with no used toys in their homes to offer, have purchased gifts especially for the mission, Mr. Bond suggested:

"Undoubtedly many more persons will be aiding us in the same manner. Because of the heavy demands it would be wise spending if several reasonably-priced rather than expensive gifts be purchased. This will permit us to spread the good cheer to more children."

Individuals, Sunday school classes and other groups wishing to contribute and who cannot deliver the toys to the mission are requested to telephone Atlantic 0127. Workers have volunteered to gather such gifts.

CHARGES WIFE LEFT HIM

Richard D. Barr, of 156 North Craig street, is seeking a divorce from Mrs. Florence Barr, 28, of Holbrook street, declaring she refused to live with him. He told Judge William H. McNaugher he returned from work and found the furniture was gone, nothing remaining but his clothes and a suitcase.

Barr said he found his wife at her parents' home and she told him she would not live with him.

Divorce suits were filed by Walter Bockstoce against Helen G. Bockstoce; John E. Thomas against Nancy B. Thomas; Anna Goodisky against Joseph Goodisky; Antonio Altieri against Minnie Altieri.

Divorces were granted to Alice R. Mulkie from Frank E. Mulkie, Jr., and Amanda Juhrden from Otto Juhrden.

Button on Sweater Stops Bandit Bullet

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Lady Luck yesterday smiled on John Murray, 35, Dorchester chain store manager, who was struck by a bandit's bullet, but, believe-it-or-not, was uninjured.

The bullet struck a button on the sweater Murray wore and when attendants at City Hospital, who had him on the operating table, began searching for possible injuries, the bullet fell from Murray's tie. He suffered only a slight scratch on the shoulder.

Victim of Insomnia Carves Hall Model

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—A model of the Berlin City Hall, fashioned in plaster of paris with a razor blade, is Karl Hoeke's tribute to insomnia.

Hoeke divided his sleepless nights between a curbstone stool, where he sketched the building, and his laboratory, where he laboriously cut out the model. Everything was exact, even to a small clock in the tower.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Neglect Makes Asthma So Difficult to Cure

Asthma is a common and often neglected ailment. Much of this negligence can be explained. It is due to the popular belief that asthma is incurable.

Dr. Copeland

As a matter of fact, complete relief depends on cooperation between the physician and the sufferer. Only by prolonged study can the underlying cause of a given case of asthma be determined.

The causes of asthma are many. For convenience they are divided into two groups. The first group is made up of cases coming from causes arising outside the body. Scientifically this is spoken of as the "extrinsic" group. The victim is sensitive to the pollens of various plants, such as ragweed and timothy grass; emanations from animals; vegetable dust and certain foods. By means of special so-called "skin tests," it is possible to determine the substance or substances responsible for the attacks.

In this group relief is obtained by a treatment called "desensitization." Injections under the skin are made. For this purpose vaccines are made from the substances that cause the attacks.

In addition to receiving these protecting injections, it is advisable to avoid contact with the offending substances. If the asthmatic attacks are due to a sensitivity to a certain plant, it is wise to shun that plant.

The "intrinsic" group is the second one. The causes are found within the body. For example, the attacks may be traced to an infection of the mucous membrane, or to localized infections in diseased nasal sinuses, teeth, tonsils, appendix, gallbladder or intestine. These cases are markedly benefited when the source of infection is determined and removed.

It is true that many cases are difficult to cure, but to say that asthma is incurable is far from true. Many a person suffers from the disease without taking medical advice or having a complete physical examination.

They may resort to all forms of patent medicines. This is a mistake because if relief is to be hoped for, accurate and scientific measures must be taken. These are impossible without careful study of every case.

Place yourself in the hands of a competent physician. If he advises X-ray examination and special tests, do not hesitate to take them. This is the only sure way to determine the source of your attacks. All abnormalities and defects discovered should be corrected if possible. Attention to the diet and manner of living is important.

Let me warn you against quack medicines advertised for the relief and cure of asthma. There is no pill that can be bought which in itself will cure asthma.

Do not be misled by temporary relief. You should seek permanent cure. Valuable time is lost by self-medication and unscientific treatment. In many cases actual harm results from this unwise practice.

Consular Body Gives Holiday Greetings

The Consular Association of Pittsburgh today commented on the good will now being apparent throughout the world and extended the people of Western Pennsylvania the following Christmas and New Year greetings:

"With a sincere wish that the New Year will witness a unity of purpose among all nations . . . a unity of purpose that will create an unbreakable bond of world-wide friendship."

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

Saves $2. So Easy! No Cooking!

The best cough remedy that money could buy can easily be mixed at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and saves two-thirds of the money a family usually spends on cough medicine. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, clears the air passages, and thus ends a severe cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Background Not Necessary If You Have Backbone

Does your "place in the sun" depend on whether you live in a dump or a palace?

Mig thinks it does.

Lois started the argument. She was pretty and peppy, and in Hi. She had scads of friends, but she thought she had to tell them goodbye at the schoolhouse door, because if they ever saw where she lived they'd never look at her again.

We told her she was all wrong; that so long as she, herself, was a Regular Kid, folks would give her credit, and not look too closely at the parlor carpet.

That made Mig mad, so here she is, to tell us, in plenty of mean language—

But read it for yourself, and then let us know what you think.

READER DISAPPOINTED

Dear Miss Robinson—

I've just read your answer to Lois, and, frankly speaking, your lack of understanding and sympathy for her condition is a surprise and a disappointment. I, for one, think you answered that way just to "get a rise" out of your readers—to see if they really were enough interested in what you wrote to answer you.

In the office where I work we have discussed that letter. You would be surprised if you knew how many people all their lives have to "live down" such conditions, which have plainly defined their "place in the sun."

In many cases finances aren't the cause at all. There are parents who stubbornly refuse to make even the slightest change in their homes, saying "this has been good enough for us for the last 20 years, and it will have to be good enough for you. We'll not have any new-fangled stuff around. If your friends think anything of you, they'll think well of your home, too."

INFERIORITY COMPLEX

But please bear in mind the average High School youngster's attitude, and refusal to see deeper than outward appearances. Lois's friends accept her at face value in the classroom. They like her, and imagine her in a certain home environment. Then, if they visit her home, what a let down! They figure she's "not so hot" after all. They are not comfortable in her home, because it's so different from their own. So many things "need to be done" about it. And as for the boys, you can see their change of expression before they take off their coats.

This holds true, too, of many an adult that I know, and that many others know. When Lois can't be proud of her home and feels that she must apologize for it, how in the world can she "brighten it up?"

I'll bet many a failure in life has come from an inferiority complex created by having to apologize for one's home—by the thought of the "let down" in a visitor's expression, and the "let down" of one's self in that visitor's estimation. I know that to be a fact, no matter how much you deny it. Just ask anyone who really knows.

MIG.

Well, of course, Mig, if you're going to slink around, apologizing and feeling like a worm, because you can't show your company into a palace, it will give you the well-known I. C. But why feel that way?

BE GAY AND FRIENDLY

I know a family—there are two girls in college and a fine, upstanding boy in Hi—who live in an unpainted three-room shack in the country. Friends flock in and out, and invite the kids to all the doings there are. There are no Inferiority Complexes there. No "let-downs." No one feels ashamed.

And these kids have all the "place in the sun" that there is.

They have it because they do not waste any time worrying over "What Will People Say?" They are too busy being interested and gay and friendly. People like them because they, themselves, are worth liking—all sorts of people, both rich and poor.

So if you've spunk enough to stand on your own two feet and be yourself, you'll get there, even if the carpet is faded and the Chesterfield has seen better days.

It isn't your lack of a "Background" that licks you, sister. It is your lack of a backbone.

By FAY KING

How often we see tall men with tiny wives, and short men with tall wives. The little person is usually boss of the pair.

A big fellow is rather proud of his brawn, and knows a small wife beside him makes him look even more a giant.

A short man is proud of his brain and bossing ability, and has observed that big women are often more amiable than little ones.

Stature is very deceiving. Many a big, burly giant of a man is merely a good-natured overgrown boy, while a brainy little fellow is a regular Napoleon ruling all.

So are big women often as obedient as sweet tempered children, while little women can be stubborn, driving and managing to exasperation.

Heart of a Wife -:-

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Guards Secret of Savarin Trust Fund

As Sam Brixton turned to my father, patently startled by his question, I wondered if the man realized that each person in the hotel sitting room save his wife was watching him furtively, but searchingly, and that with the exception of Ronald, his stepson, whose agonized young face showed the battle between his loyal affection and his hideous doubt, the scales of opinion were weighed down by hostility.

"Why—it looks like a stall, to me," Brixton said. "We're none of us millionaires, and kidnapers generally have a pretty good idea of how much the traffic will bear. You notice, too, they don't demand the money be brought tomorrow. They simply tell us to drop a note tomorrow, telling when we can bring the hundred thousand dollars.

"If you ask me, that leaves it wide open for us to tell them in the note that it will take a long time to raise a hundred thousand dollars cash, but that we can raise, say, half of it."

"And while you're haggling, our girls will be killed!" his wife cried hysterically.

"No, no; we'll promise the whole thing," Sam Brixton said nervously. But Lillian for the first time took her eyes from the photograph of Marion's letter, and frowned.

"Whatever the 'Chief' decides to do is wise," she said incisively. "You may trust him. And you must remember, Helena, what it means under present conditions for all of us, working together, to get that amount in cash."

THINKS OF LEGACY

There was in her voice something of the despair that was in Helena's eyes, and I almost bit my lips through in repressing my impulse to shout aloud my knowledge of the goodly sum in gilt-edged securities, capable of realizing instant cash—the legacy that Robert Savarin had left for me to be used for Lillian or Marion, whenever the need for the money should arise.

But not before the Brixton's; not even before Harry Underwood—especially not before Harry Underwood—could I voice my knowledge. I must tell Dicky first, then Lillian, that, with the help of the sum I could command, the demands of the kidnapers could be met.

"At least," my father said briskly, "the girls are safe so far; and it is to the advantage of their captors to treat them kindly and take good care of them. It is also inadvisable, I think, to do any more searching of roads, or to display any activities on behalf of the girls which might lead these men to suspect that we are trying to find them. Richard will be back here tonight, will he not?" as he turned to me.

"That is what he planned, I think," I returned.

"I'll have to go to New York the first thing," Samuel Brixton said hurriedly.

"The little we have," Harry Underwood said, looking at his wife sadly and tenderly, "is where we can get at it by telephone. It is only a drop in the bucket. But we can both mortgage our futures. I'm going to put in a call for Philip Veritzen to meet me down the line here about 25 miles. Is there anybody you want to see, dear?"

WANTS TO SEE LAWYER

Lillian looked up from the photographed note again, her brows still furrowed.

"What? Oh, yes. Ask Bennie Schwartzman to come out to wherever you're going. I'll meet him there."

I saw the road ahead of her now. Bennie Schwartzman was her agent, an attorney as shrewd and efficient as he was conscientious and kindly.

"What can I do?" Helena cried.

Lillian started and then crossed to her, and put her hand upon her shoulder.

"The hardest thing of all, dearest. Will you stay here quietly, and try to get some rest—sleep, if possible—this forenoon? Then when I come back this afternoon you can get up if you wish, while I lie down."

"Oh, I can't stay alone," Helena wailed, "and I'm so ill! My head is splitting!"

Lillian's eyes went first to Ronald and then across Helena's shoulder to me, as she shaped her lips to form the noiseless words:

"Doctor. Sleeping draught."

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Correct Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am employed in the sales office of an out-of-town company, which is being managed by a man and his wife. They are very lovely to me, and last year I received Christmas presents from both of them, also from two of their immediate relatives. I did not give anything, as the matter had not been discussed, and I was not expecting anything from anyone, except perhaps from my "employer." Should I give anything this year? And if so, what would you suggest as a gift (or gifts) for the ladies?

PUZZLED.

If I were you, I believe that I wouldn't give Christmas presents to these people this year either. Send charming Christmas cards to each of them, with friendly messages of greetings on them, or, on Christmas morning, send a box of flowers, but don't make your gifts more consequential than this.

Contract Bridge -:-

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

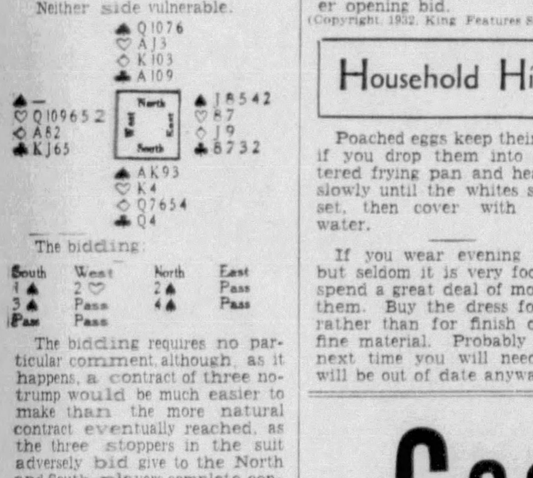
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Unfavorable Trump Distribution

When the Declarer and his partner hold eight of the 13 trumps, divided 4-4, there always remains the remote possibility that one adversary may hold all five. The chance is not great, but when this distribution occurs it usually requires extremely accurate play to make whatever contract has been undertaken, and any hunger for overtricks is quite likely to be unsatisfied.

However, the hand below, played in a recent team-of-eight match in New York City, permitted the making of a four spade contract, and an overtrick as well, against five adverse trumps in one hand, because the Declarer carefully planned the play from the moment the cards went down on the table.

South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding requires no particular comment although, as it happens, a contract of three notrump would be much easier to make than the more natural contract eventually reached, as the three stoppers in the suit adversely bid give to the North and South players complete control of the hand without the interference of adverse trumps.

However, the contract appeared easy enough, but South, when he noted the distribution, decided that he must make not only four-odd, but five, because it was probable that the hand would be played at notrump by his opponents holding the same cards at another table, and thus he would be defeated if he only fulfilled his contract.

The Opening lead was the heart Ten, upon which a small heart was played from Dummy, and the Declarer won with the King. He now laid down the King of trumps only to receive the bad news that all five trumps were bunched in one hand. There still remained the chance, however, not only for the contract, but the desired overtrick. Abandoning the play of the trumps, a small diamond was led from the closed hand, and West played a small card. The trick was won with the King in Dummy, and East dropped the 9, marking his holding as not more than two cards in that suit and possibly a singleton, unless he was false-carding. The bad news might as well be read at once, so the diamond 3 was led, and South breathed a sigh of relief when East followed suit. The Queen went up, and West won with the Ace and immediately returned the suit, giving East a ruff.

While no other line of play would have helped, as a matter of fact, this cleared up the entire problem. East returned a club, which was won with the Ace, but the adverse trumps were now drawn, the last being taken in the closed hand, the two good diamonds cashed, and the successful finesse in hearts against the heart bidder permitted the making of all the remaining tricks.

TODAY'S QUESTION

♠ K ♡ AKJ9764 ◇ J32 ♣ A9

Answer: One heart. The hand does not contain sufficient honor strength or playing-tricks to warrant any higher opening bid.

Household Hints

Poached eggs keep their shape if you drop them into a buttered frying pan and heat very slowly until the whites start to set, then cover with boiling water.

If you wear evening clothes but seldom it is very foolish to spend a great deal of money on them. Buy the dress for style rather than for finish or very fine material. Probably by the next time you will need it, it will be out of date anyway.

Good News for Colds-Susceptibles

Colds-Susceptibles, According to Recent Medical Research, Are Those Who Have Four or More Colds a Year. Estimates Indicate That 30 Million Americans Belong to This Group.

If you catch cold easily you're a "Colds-Susceptible." Be especially careful at present. "Grippy" colds—so prevalent now—lower body resistance and often pave the way for 'flu, bronchitis and pneumonia.

The wise course to follow is that outlined in Vics Plan for better Control of Colds. Last season, in clinical tests among thousands of people, this safe, practical Plan reduced the number and duration of colds by half—cut the costs of colds more than half. To you also it can mean fewer colds. Less severe colds. Less expense.

Vicks Plan was made possible by the discovery of Vicks Nose & Throat Drops—the new aid in preventing colds. These Drops are a companion product to Vicks VapoRub, preferred by two generations for treating colds. Together with certain simple rules of health they form Vicks Plan for better Control of Colds.

HOW VICKS PLAN WORKS

To Prevent Many Colds—At that first feeling of stuffiness or nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze—Nature's usual warning that a cold is coming on—use Vicks Nose & Throat Drops, the new aid in preventing colds. Used in time many colds can be avoided.

To End a Cold Sooner—If a cold has developed, or strikes without warning, vigorous measures are necessary. At bedtime, apply Vicks VapoRub for its direct, double action while you sleep. During the day, use the convenient Vicks Nose Drops for added comfort and relief while you work.

MAN BURNS TO DEATH IN ATTEMPT TO SAVE CASH

POLITICS

Mansfield Not First Dual-Job Senator

By MARK SHIELDS

If Senator-County Commissioner William D. Mansfield decides to fight to a finish the court action designed to compel him to resign from one of his public offices it is probable the Legislature will have completed its business before a decision is reached.

Mr. Shields

And after this session, Senator Mansfield will have completed the Senate term for which he was elected two years ago. He does not intend to be a candidate again, no matter what the outcome of the present action. Moreover, he denies reports that he might resign as County Commissioner to continue in the Senate, which some of his friends wanted him to do.

Considerable discussion arose when Mansfield determined to continue in the Senate after being elected to the county board. Informal question was raised as to the legality of such action, and the opinion was prevalent that, whatever the law, it was bad precedent for one man to attempt to fill two such important posts.

Divides Senate Pay Among Charities

In the special session held after he was elected commissioner Mansfield took the pay of a Senator, in addition to his commissioner's salary, but divided the Senate pay among charitable agencies in Pittsburgh and McKeesport, his home. This served somewhat to quiet criticism, though it did not silence some politicians opposed to Mansfield, who wished the opportunity to add to their power his Senate seat.

That, in reality, was the principal reason Mansfield did not resign from the Senate. Had he been assured that Assistant County Solicitor James H. McClure, veteran member of the Lower House—re-elected by a narrow margin last month—would be chosen his successor in the Senate it is more than likely he would have stepped aside.

Mansfield Relies On Supreme Court Ruling

But that assurance could not be procured from the Senator's political opponents. The faction headed by Senator James J. Coyne, with County Chairman William H. Coleman as its McKeesport representative, would have entered a candidate for the vacancy. Though Coleman's real desire is to be elected to the Common Pleas Court bench it is more than likely he would have run for the Senate, and probably with success.

Mansfield, in retaining the two jobs, relied on a Supreme Court decision in the case of former Senator Pat Joyce, of Luzerne County. Joyce was a poor director when elected to the Senate, and his right to sit was contested on that ground. The court held that the two positions were not incompatible, the test the constitution puts on dual office holding.

Other Legislators In Dual Posts

Mansfield is not the only one who has held a post in the Legislature and at the same time has occupied an administrative position in local government. Former Representative Hagmaier was burgess of Aspinwall. Dr. Joseph G. Steedle is burgess of McKees Rocks. There are several other instances throughout the state, but Mansfield attracts the most attention because there are few jobs as important as that of County Commissioner in Allegheny County.

The Senator-Commissioner has been advised by many of his friends to resign the Senate. It has been urged on him that the duties of one office this winter, in view of the tremendous responsibilities which devolve upon all public officials in such a time of economic stress, are sufficient to tax the strength of any man.

In addition to his two public positions Mansfield has private business responsibilities which require strict attention.

Mansfield Spends Much Time As Commissioner

There can be no denial of the fact that of the three Commissioners, Mansfield spends probably more time in his office in the courthouse than any of the trio. This winter he must be in Harrisburg for from two to four days a week, and meetings of the Commissioners will have to be held either the latter part of the week or Monday morning if he is to attend.

There is little doubt but what the impetus back of the present action is political. In argument against Mansfield it will be said that this is no time for a man to be holding two positions, even if the dual capacity is legal. With that view, in this or any other time, there will not be much difference of opinion. It does not seem good ethics, whatever the compatability or legality, for a man to be State Senator and County Commissioner.

But that the retirement of Mansfield from either will better any worthy unemployed person is a little too much to believe is the sentiment of opposing politicians, even in this season of Santa Claus and pleasant myths. The job is wanted for one of the faithful—if he can get it.

And that is all right, too, if the citizens of Mansfield's senatorial district wish so to decide.

Professor Ends 'Starvation' Strike

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(INS.)—Dr. Arthur Kraus, philosophy instructor at City College, who determined to starve to death in protest against anti-Semitic demonstrations in Poland, had changed his mind today.

From Beth Israel Hospital, the second he has entered since he started hunger fasting nine days ago, Krause announced he had broken his fast and partaken of food.

Landlord Forgives Jobless Back Rent

This is going to be a very unhappy Christmas for 2-year-old "Joey" McAllister, of 4112 Winterburn street, Greenfield, unless "Pal," his black-and-tan terrier pup, comes back.

"Joey" has lost eight pounds since "Pal" went away and his mother, Mrs. Mae McAllister, says he won't eat because:

"Pal run away up there."

"Pal" had been "Joey's playmate and bodyguard. Occasionally the dog would make brief sorties through the neighborhood, but always returned to his young master, wagging his stump of a tail and ready for play. But two weeks ago "Pal" didn't come back.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

Six years ago in Geneva at a disarmament conference he was head of France's delegation and I saw quite a lot of him. He is very able. I have always wondered since then why they never used him more. France will pay, and it can't possibly hurt them as bad as it will some of our writers, and American financiers. I never saw people so broken-hearted over our country receiving a little dab of money. Congress voting on beer again today. It passed the people. But they can't get it through Congress. Yours, WIL.

MOVE TO OUST MANSFIELD PUZZLES

Commissioner Holds Politics to Blame; Kline's Denial

The question: Who and what are behind the attack on Commissioner W. D. Mansfield's dual positions as County Commissioner and State Senator? brought conflicting replies from several principals today.

Mayor Charles H. Kline said:

"Not I."

Commissioner Mansfield:

"I see it only as a political move to keep me from serving at the next session of the Legislature."

Attorney E. E. McMonigle:

"The action has no political significance whatsoever, and those who are interested in the proceeding are not politicians, but public spirited citizens."

David E. Brown:

"I was told Kline and Coyne were behind this."

WRIT OBTAINED

The question resulted from the writ of quo warranto obtained in Common Pleas Court yesterday requiring Mansfield to show by what authority he holds both offices. Attorney McMonigle filed a petition for the writ in behalf of Walter A. Smith, a resident of Pittsburgh.

Bown, a resident of Crafton, reiterated today that efforts had been made to obtain his signature to the petition, and said McMonigle told him Mayor Kline and Senator James J. Coyne were behind the move to oust Mansfield. . McMonigle asserted Bown declined to sign the petition because the attorney refused to disclose the names of those employing him, and added he did not tell Bown "the organization." Kline or Coyne was behind the proceeding. He said:

"Those were his own conclusions. Neither Mayor Kline or Senator Coyne knew that the proceeding was contemplated."

PHONES MANSFIELD

Mayor Kline telephoned Senator Mansfield and assured the Senator he was not a party to the move. Mansfield said he was in no position to say what political interests were behind the action, but he could drawn only one conclusion, and that was the proceeding was a political move.

Associates of Mansfield saw in the action an attempt to "frighten" him into resigning as state senator, since he cannot by legal means be prevented from serving at the 1933 session of the Legislature.

Mansfield said he wished to serve in the Senate in order to put into effect certain economy measures that would benefit the county. He has said publicly he intends to introduce a measure to abolish the delinquent tax office.

GREENVILLE, Pa., Dec. 20.—John Doolittle, 54, farmer, arrested just before the funeral of his wife last Saturday, today was exonerated by a coroner's jury of having caused her death. Mrs. Doolittle died in the hospital last week and on complaint of neighbors the husband was arrested. They charged Doolittle had beaten his wife and thrown her out of the house. She contracted pneumonia, they said, and her death followed.

FELL GIANT OAK, STEAL HONEY

Thieves who cut down a giant oak tree on the Mt. Nebo road, near Camp Horne, to steal 300 pounds of wild honey stored in it, were being sought by county detectives today. Part of the tree fell on the lawn of B. W. Merker, assistant superintendent of police of the Pennsylvania Railroad, damaging his home.

SHAKY BANDITS GET $36,000

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Five nervous robbers held up 11 persons and escaped with approximately $35,000 in cash from the branch bank of the Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, at Forty-fifth and Walnut streets, West Philadelphia, today. The loss is covered by insurance.

While four the men, whose hands shook as they held sawed-off shotguns, kept eight employes, two workmen and a customer covered, the other robber, armed with a pistol and carrying a burlap bag strapped around his neck, scooped virtually all of the money in the cash drawers into the bag. A sixth man was at the wheel of a waiting automobile in which the gang escaped.

The holdup took only seven minutes and was carried out while hundreds of persons passed outside.

We've Given Up Ships; Let's Keep That Last Musket

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

We are entering the fifteenth year of peace without a rest.

Since 1918 the commissioners have reported progress minus brake linings.

During that oratorical period, we have slipped from borrowing to begging, from paying to evading and from postponement to cancellation.

The hair that divides the sublime from the ridiculous is now a long white beard.

Our last diplomat got home this week and says the rate of exchange has boosted again. It used to be 20 francs to a dollar. Now, it's one franc for your shirt, socks and life.

Now, they're going to reduce our Army, Navy and Aviation Department. In another year we won't have anything around the works that can hurt a man.

We should keep at least one old musket somewhere on Pennsylvania avenue. Not to collect anything. But we must have something handy to stop the borrowing.

WIFE, DAUGHTER ESCAPE BLAZE IN RUSSELTON

Storekeeper Dies as Family, Unaware, Watches Fire

Trapped when he ran back into his blazing home to recover a hidden bag of money last night, John Dompe, 60, of Russelton, was burned to death.

Dompe was sleeping in the living room when his wife discovered the flames near the chimney. The two fled from the two-story frame building with their daughter, Anna, and were safe, when Dompe remembered the money in his bedroom and ran back into the flames.

Mr. Dompe

His son, Alex, 21, who was nearby at the time, and Mrs. Dompe and Anna watched the building burn. All thought the father safe. His disappearance was not discovered until later. The charred body was identified by Constable Ruben Dunbar, a cousin.

$25,000 LOSS ESTIMATED

The building was the largest in Russelton and comprised a grocery store, hardware store, a storage house and the Dompe home. The structure burned to the ground and the property loss was estimated at $25,000.

Firemen from Cheswick and West Deer Township answered the alarm but were handicapped by a lack of water. They stretched 1,600 feet of hose from the Republic Colliers Company hydrant, only to find the pipes were frozen.

With the aid of chemicals they succeeded in preventing the fire from spreading to an adjacent two-story brick building housing a chain store and home. When the front wall of the grocery store fell it tore down telephone wires, cutting off telephone service in Royal Ridge and Russelton all of last night.

Four families were routed from their homes when fire, caused by exploding grease, partly destroyed one home and damaged another in Oak street, North Braddock, last night.

NORTH BRADDOCK BLAZE

The blaze, caused when lard became ignited in the kitchen of Mrs. Margaret Kovach, of 1448 Oak street, spread throughout the two-story frame dwelling occupied by the families of Gustave and Charles Kovach and, climbing between the walls to the roof, was communicated to the adjoining home of Frank and Harold Speckhals.

East Pittsburgh and North Braddock volunteer firemen, handicapped by icy streets, battled the blaze for nearly two hours. Loss was estimated at $18,000 by Fire Chief Louis Burdell, of North Braddock.

LIGHT DISPUTE IN DUQUESNE

Unless Duquesne Council and the Duquesne Light Company reach an agreement on a new contract, the city may be without street lights after January 1, it was intimated last night when Council refused to accep the terms submitted.

Council objected to the five-year duration of the contract and a $26,000 yearly rate. It asked a one-year contract and insisted the rate was in excess of what the city could afford. A plan whereby the city would save $12,000 yearly was submitted to the company.

Councilman E. H. Fey, chairman of the finance committee, said:

"Unless the light company agrees to our proposals, I suggest the lights be put out and extra policemen hired."

A resolution requesting the Legislature to pass necessary laws providing for the return of a portion of the money collected on automobile licenses and gasoline taxes was adopted.

'ANTIQUE' SLED EVEN RUNS UP HILL

MISS BETTY COHEN, AGED 6 . . . . . SHE WORKS THE LEVERS, THE SLED RUMBLES ALONG

Propelled by Handles By Rider; Can't Be Steered

Why drag your sled up hill when you can buy a sled on which you can propel yourself.

At a second-hand store on Fifth avenue (antique shoppe, according to the proprietor) the contraption is on display. Throngs gather to examine it.

Even though the crowds are skeptical, it is a good buy. The salesman, who claims he bought the sled from a person on Forward avenue who did not know its worth, says it is a genuine antique, at least 40 years old.

It is propelled by two handles on the sides and, if the snow is just right, will move up and down hill at a good rate of speed.

The sled will move when the levers are being moved forward as well as backward, due to the intricate mechanism. But it cannot be steered while going down hill.

Boy, 8, Travels Alone To Meet Santa at Sea

An 8-year-old French lad passed through Pittsburgh last night with hopes of seeing Santa Claus in mid-Atlantic.

Emile Gaudibert is traveling alone from San Francisco to Havre, France—a 7,000-mile trip. He left his parents on the West Coast last Wednesday and hopes to greet his grandmother in France next week.

At the Pennsylvania Station, where he stopped for an hour last night, under the care of Travelers' Aid, he said:

"I wanted to see Santa in California, but now I'm going to see him on the boat."

Emile is apparently France's champion boy traveler. When he was five he made the trip from France to San Francisco alone.

BENTLEYVILLE TO OPEN NEW 24-ROOM SCHOOL JAN. 2

Two Boys Need 'Eyes'—And It's Up to Santa

MRS. DOROTHY ROBERTS EDWARD, 3½

"DEAR SANTA: PLEASE BRING ME SOME GLASSES IF YOU CAN"

OLD STRUCTURE REPLACED AT LESS COST

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., Dec. 20.—The Bentleyville School Board today had a new 24-room school and a surplus of $21,000 in its treasury, all because it's old 19-room school burned May 4, 1931. More than 1,100 pupils will begin classes in the new building January 2.

The building destroyed by fire cost $143,000 and the school board collected $81,000 insurance. On the same spot today stands the new and larger building, erected for $60,000.

HOLLOW TILE USED

The interior is constructed of three and four-inch hollow tile, the floors are supported on a structural steel frame, using open truss steel joists. On the joists are placed tongued and grooved gypsum planks, and on top of these are laid mastic tile in patterns, which make it fireproof and soundproof.

On each side of the building are safety exists in the shape of fire towers. The heating system is hot air, thermostatically controlled. A cistern built in the building with a 1,500-barrel capacity will supply the water reserve for the school and for the local fire department, when needed. The former building did not have a water supply.

The new building contains additional supply rooms, teachers' and pupils' rest rooms and locker rooms, and the office contains a fireproof vault.

PLAN SECOND BUILDING

An additional structure adjoining the main building will be erected later at a cost of $17,000. The main floor will have the auditorium and gymnasium, with showers and dressing rooms in the basement.

The school board has a balance of $56,000 in the Farmers and Miners' National Bank, Bentleyville, which closed October 5. The institution is to reopen by Christmas, and the school board will receive $33,000 bonded deposits. The balance will be forthcoming later. The board has recently received state appropriations of $11,700. Vernon J. Dietz, general contractor, Johnstown, has already been paid more than half the cost.

FINANCES IMPROVED

Thomas F. White, a director of the School Board, said:

"The school district is better off today than when the other building burned. We now have a real up-to-date fireproof building for half the money. The foundation, not damaged by the blaze, saved us about $15,000, and we saved a bit on the heating system, which was not seriously harmed in the fire."

Other members of the board are J. L. Brown, president; Charles D. Myers, vice president; Claude E. Nixon, treasurer, and John McCormick, director.

Mr. Brown, an appointee of the Washington County Court, succeeds Mrs. Belle J. Piersol, who died two months ago.

The school children now attend classes in churches, lodge rooms and halls throughout the borough.

FARMERS PLAN MILK COMBINE

Formation of the Western Pennsylvania Milk Producers' Association to fight what the producers say are "bankruptcy and starvation prices," is being sought by dairymen. Membership will not be confined to the dairymen of Pennsylvania, but will take in those in adjacent states who supply milk for Pennsylvania consumption, it was said.

Prices have drifted so low that organized producers, distributing their milk through the Dairymen's Co-Operative Sales Agency of Pittsburgh, and the independents, selling to smaller dealers, are said to be ready to combine.

In Butler County the independent milk producers are leading the movement, while in Washington the dairymen's co-operative sales group has assumed leadership. Meetings have also been held in Beaver, Lawrence and Westmoreland counties.

Washington County producers organized by electing J. B. Henderson, of Hickory, president; Homer M. Lowry, Rea, secretary, and Lee Cowden, Hickory, treasurer. Henderson was chosen representative of the organized producers, and F. H. Clovis, of Monongahela, of the independent group, as members of the Western Pennsylvania Council.

PARISIAN TRIED IN U. S. MURDER

VERSAILLES, France, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Guy Davin, 25, went on trial today for the murder of Richard Wall, an American, who was slain a year ago.

Police announced shortly after Davin's arrest that he had confessed killing Wall in the forest of St. Cucufa, near Paris, and stealing Wall's $300.

For a while the crime mystified the police. Early last December they found an abandoned automobile at the edge of the forest, near the Triel Bridge across the Seine. Several residents of the neighborhood said they had seen a man throw a heavy bundle into the river near the car.

A search of the vicinity disclosed scraps of burned clothing, and from cobbler's marks on the charred shoes police established Wall's identity, traced his movements on the day he was killed, and arrested Davin, a Parisian. Wall's body was recovered from the Seine a month after his death.

DRYS 'ARREST' STILL RAIDERS

After seizing equipment in an underground distillery in Dailey road, Brentwood, Constables E. W. Gracey and J. W. Palucis investigated a garage in Pyramid street, a mile away, which, they were told, was used as a storehouse by the moonshiners, last night.

When the raiders drove up a squad of prohibition agents investigating the garage sought to arrest them. The constables convinced the agents they were not bootleggers.

The underground raid yielded a 150-gallon still, 19 barrels of mash and 25 gallons of liquor. Ignatz Pelviles, arrested in the raid, was lodged in jail pending hearing before Justice of the Peace Milton B. Church, of Brentwood.

FRENCH EDITOR TALKS ON DEBT

France has the money to pay its war debt, but believes "world conditions are changed to a degree which makes it imperative that the debt agreements be revised before any future payments are made," according to Raymond Lange, political editor of the newspaper Intransigeant, of Paris. Lange spoke last night before the College Club under the auspices of the Alliance Francaise of Pittsburgh. He added:

"Premier Paul-Boncour is of the same opinion as was former Premier Herriot. He is willing to make the December payment if Washington will give France assurance that a new debt agreement will be negotiated."

FOOD BASKETS GIFT OF STORES

Christmas baskets for 800 poor families of Pittsburgh will be the Christmas gifts of 700 employes of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company.

The baskets, containing enough to feed a large family, were made possible through a fund made up of employe contributions. They will be delivered by Kroger company trucks.

The names of those to get the baskets were furnished by the store employes.

TURKEY-KILLING DOG EXECUTED

SPOKANE, Wash., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Once reprieved by the judge who sentenced him to death, "Printz," German shepherd dog convicted of killing turkeys, was executed yesterday in the lethal gas chamber of the city pound.

Tearful pleas of the Louis Clausen family, owners of the dog, moved Police Judge Stocker to commute the sentence to banishment to a farm if assurance could be given he would never again be allowed in the city.

Humane Society officials and police decided to carry out the original order of the court when efforts to find the dog a satisfactory home in the country were unsuccessful.

Deficiencies Menace Future of Jobless Men's Sons

The future of two boys largely depends on Santa Claus bringing them practical gifts Christmas.

Both are sons of unemployed men who have tried many ways to obtain these gifts for their children, but find that they must now count on Santa Claus.

Edward Roberts, Jr., the 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Roberts, 279 Spahr street, will go blind, according to doctors, if he does not get glasses.

Before the father lost his job four months ago, the mother had paid $3 down on the glasses at a clinic. The father lost his job before she could get the other $3.50 necessary to obtain them.

The other boy, Robert Ackerman, 12, is one of eight children ranging from 10 weeks to 15 years. Their father, John, 1922 Wrights way, has been unemployed three years.

Robert began having trouble a year ago when a cinder lodged in his eye. After he spent five months in a hospital the eye was removed last August. To make matters worse his artificial eye was broken several weeks ago.

Will Santa Claus remember these boys?

STATE DIRECTS RELIEF WORK IN COUNTY

The Commonwealth of Pensylvania today had taken over the job of administering unemployment relief in Allegheny County,

The state moved in quietly yesterday and took on its pay roll approximately 503 workers from the Allegheny County Emergency Association and from Welfare Fund agencies.

Meanwhile, the Allegheny County Emergency Association, hitherto the most important connecting link between state and federal aid and administering agencies, lapsed into comparative unimportance.

TO BE SUB-AGENCY

The present set-up provides for an Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board as a sub-agency of the incorporated Pennsylvania Emergency Relief Board, in Harrisburg.

Funds for food orders and their administration, as well as for other commodities purchasable under the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's articles and the state's Talbot Act, will be administered through and by it.

Among its employes will be persons employed by the Welfare Fund agencies to administer food orders. These will continue to work in the agencies and under agency supervision, although they will technically be controlled by the Emergency Relief Board.

DUTIES ASSIGNED

Heading the board will be Samuel E. Claney, who will continue in his capacity as director of the Emergency Association.

The Emergency Association will have among its activities liaison work with city and county officials, guidance of the thrift garden plan and administration of the Welfare Fund $300,000 relief provision for cases outside the scope of state and federal funds.

Community councils and local relief funds will continue under the control of the Emergency Association.

WELFARE FUND SUCCESS CITED

Figures issued yesterday by the Welfare Fund revealed that Pittsburgh was one of the first cities in the country to go "over the top" in a campaign for more than $1,000,000. Slightly more than $2,480,000 was contributed by Allegheny County for the fund's requirements for 1932 and 1933.

Of 109 other communities which have completed their drives, only 32 reached their goals, it was said. None of them sought more than $1,000,000.

Window Smashed In Barbers' War

Pittsburgh's barber shop war flared up again today when the plate glass window in the shop operated by Frank Comito, Broad street and Larimer avenue, was smashed.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(Unintelligent Items for Intelligent Idiots)

That the richest man in the world is the Indian Prince known as the Nizam of Hyderabad. Part of his fabulous fortune is due to the practice of extracting a gift from each of his official dinner guests. (He's a plenty wise guy. Usually has about 800 for dinner!)

That there are nearly 45,000 crosseyed school kids in N. Y. C.

That if you're ever kidnaped by Chinese bandits you can save your life by refusing to get down on your knees when they want to behead you. (It is bad manners to decapitate a man not kneeling).

That "Listen to the Mocking Bird" made three million smackers for the publishers, and still is the biggest song hit ever written.

That when beer comes back, if ever, it probably will not be in the old-style vats, for Goodyear has developed a special duralumin for storing those suds.

That Aristotle believed that deaf people had no souls.

That there isn't a single sleight of hand trick in which the sleeve is employed. (That's why they're always so willing to roll them up to fool you on your first guess).

That wise European travelers are the last ones off the boat, rather than the first, because by that time customs men are likely to be tired.

That "R. Crusoe" was the first newspaper serial published.

That, according to Burton Rascoe, Daniel Defoe invented the "colyum" idea of jests and satirical thrusts.

That many scholars believe large parts of "Paradise Lost" to be sheer plagiarism. (Please don't talk about me when I'm gone).

That Washington forbids six of the major movie outfits from making "free" screen features of Boulder Dam. (Martin Mooney, who warned Hollywood about Hoover's pet project and then was fired for his temerity, is now laughing louder than Bernie does at his own jokes).

That a professor has found that the average American radio is turned on 4.17 hours per day.

That although conservative scientists frown on palmistry as a form of fortune telling, they can actually determine your race from a hand print or palm reading.

That no celebrated composer ever committed suicide.

That it costs less postage to send a letter from Japan to Chicago than it does to send one to your next door neighbor here.

That Schubert's effects, when he died (including his cash) came to the sum of $8.

That Tamagno, the famous tenor, was so thriftly (stingy to you!) that he washed his own underwear and socks.

That a needle, when floated in a glass of water, is an accurate compass, the point always pointing to the north.

That hair on your chest is not a sign of muscular strength. (This doesn't apply to radio comics, who can lift anything.)

That Alexander Hamilton, one of the snootier aristocrats, was of extremely obscure origin. Which, incidentally, was the cause of his duel with Aaron Burr. (I hope this doesn't Burr you.)

That in the original version of "Cinderella" there wasn't any hokum or anything about silver slippers.

That when you hear them say on the radio, "You will now hear the correct time by courtesy of the so and so watch company," you aren't at all. You really get Western Union time, W. U. being the only outfit with the O. K. from Washington.

That Gandhi's English has a slight Irish brogue.

That life insurance companies paid out over four billion dollars in 1931. (In fewer words, most dead people are worth a lot of money.)

That a gossip originally meant a god parent.

That at least 39 companies whose common shares are listed on the New York Stock Exchange have continued to pay regular dividends which are equal to or greater than their regular rates paid in 1929.

That if you think this column is hard to read you ought to try writing one like it. (Look, look, he's hinting for help!)

And that we have a very funny last paragraph, but it consumes three lines of space and there's only room for two. (Veddy soddy.)

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Mary Boland for years has been a charming comedienne of the legitimate stage, but not until last February did she ever grace a musical comedy. Then she made her debut in that class of work in "Face the Music," and it is in that Irving Berlin concoction that she will be seen here next week. The revue, for that is what it is, will open next Monday in the Nixon as the Christmas week attraction. Contrary to usual custom, there will be no holiday matinee, the first performance being listed for the evening. However, the regular afternoon performances will take place as usual, Wednesday and Saturday. Because the Nixon has no attraction this week, the sale of seats for "Face the Music" has been advanced from Thursday, the customary day, and are now available. Miss Boland, a favorite here as elsewhere, was last seen in Pittsburgh in "The Vinegar Tree."

"Twin Beds," one of the livelier farces of a few seasons ago, has been selected by George Sharp as the vehicle for the resident company in the Pitt next week. Featured in it, of course, will be Jean May, who again is at home on the familiar Pitt stage. Even her pup has found his accustomed corner in her dressing room. This pooch, a small bulldog that is the almost constant companion of the popular leading woman, must know the ropes or else Chuck Webster, stage manager for Mr. Sharp, must be a good story teller. Chuck says the mut, the first time he trotted on the stage after Miss May's return, picked out his snoozing place correctly at once and settled himself therein.

Come Wednesday and Katharine Cornell will know whether or no she has a hit in her new piece, "Lucrece," by Andre Obey, suggested by the Shakespeare poem. It opens tonight in New York, after a preliminary tour to Cleveland, Detroit, and Buffalo, where opinion on the work is said to have been varied and controversial. However, if it clicks in New York it will find a ready welcome on a more extended road tour that will follow its engagement there. The scenes of the play are introduced by music composed by Deems Taylor. Played apart from the drama it comprises a suite of five movements. Another Obey play, "Venus and Adonis," is held under option by Miss Cornell, but she may decide not to produce it because the running time is only 50 minutes, which is too short a time for an American theater.

South Sea Paradise in Avenue Cinema

Two sorts of people will be interested in "Bali, Isle of Paradise," the scenic picture at the Avenue Cinema this week. It will interest those who love beautiful pictures of tropical landscapes, rushing waves and waterfalls, picturesque ceremonials and savage customs. The picture has great value as a panorama of scenic beauty. But it will also interest the ethnologist and the student of religions—not only the quaint customs but the religious rites curiously similar to many Christian ceremonials. "Isle of Paradise" is a beautiful and instructive film.

The comic picture, "My Wife's Family," is of English origin, and very feeble in its coarse humor—in fact, it is nothing more than the old mother-in-law joke expanded till it becomes a bore.

Ricardo Cortez Signed For 'Broadway Bad'

Ricardo Cortez has been signed by Fox to play the masculine lead in "Broadway Bad," in which Joan Blondell and Ginger Rogers also will be seen. Ralph Morgan was previously announced for the leading role but due to difficulties arising in Fox's production schedule, Mr. Cortez was substituted in the role. Sidney Lanfield will direct the William Lipman and A. W. Pezet story.

Queen

March Made Busy by Award

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 20.—Winning this year's Academy award will spell plenty of hard work for Frederic March. The decision was hardly made before Paramount rushed him into the Claudette Colbert picture, and now he is named to replace George Raft in the new air film, "Eagle and the Hawk."

Miss Hopkins

This will not work any hardship on George, for he is to get the lead opposite Miriam Hopkins in "The Story of Temple Drake," formerly "Sanctuary." Thus both of Paramount's recent rebels will resume friendly relations with the company in the same picture. They are to arrive here this week and work is to begin immediately, under the direction of Stephen Roberts. Georgie, by the way, doesn't plan to take a house immediately. He'll live in the Hollywood Plaza Hotel.

The aviation picture is scheduled for a January beginning. In addition to March, it will have Gary Cooper, always providing he doesn't go to M-G-M for the next Crawford film, and Jack Oakie. An original story by John Monk Saunders, this picture relates the adventures of three war-time buddies.

Marjorie Rambeau's husband was won over to her returning to the screen, but he is coming out to Hollywood with her. His name, in case you've forgotten, is Francis Gudger . . . Thanks to a change of heart by Fox, George O'Brien will be able to get away in January instead of March. He goes to Italy to join his parents, and there's a chance that Spencer Tracy may go along. George got his passports for him and had made reservations. It's all up to Spencer now . . . Latest Hollywoodite to make the 3,000-mile journey to New York for a stay of 24 hours is Charles MacArthur. He'll conduct some business and hop a plane back to be with Helen Hayes and their baby on Christmas day.

Mr. Tracy

Due to the delayed start of "Our Betters," Joel McCrea will not be able to play in the Condie Bennett picture after all . . . Clark Gable wears a uniform for the first time on the screen in "The White Sisters" . . . The doctors have given Zasu Pitts the welcome news that she can leave the hospital on the day before Christmas . . . The Zeppo Marxes and the Dick Arlens will enjoy their tree at Lake Arrowhead. They'll leave several days early to get in some winter sports.

Tobin and Morris in 'Infernal Machine'

"Infernal Machine," an adaptation of Carl Sloboda's fantastic story, is now in production under the direction of Marcel Vernel. Genevieve Tobin and Chester Morris are playing the principal roles. Other members of the cast include Alexander Kirkland, Victor Jory, Robert Littlefield, Elizabeth Patterson, Arthur Hohl and Edward Van Sloan. This is Miss Tobin's first picture under her recently signed Fox contract.

Drama

Coming Bills On Screen

Pat O'Brien and Ralph Bellamy in "Air Mail," a thrill drama of aviation, will be the Enright feature for three days, beginning tomorrow.

From tomorrow, through Friday, the Sheridan Square screen feature will be "That's My Boy," with Richard Cromwell in the principal role. It's a football picture.

The feature photoplay in the Fulton for the week beginning Thursday will be "Me and My Gal," with Joan Bennett and Spencer Tracy in a story of a detective who falls in love with a girl he meets while rounding up a gang of crooks.

The Christmas week program in the Stanley will begin Friday, when there will be the first showing of "The Match King," based on the career of a famous swindler. Warren William is starred in it, while Lili Damita has the leading feminine role.

"Cynara," screen version of the stage play in which Philip Merivale had great success, will head the holiday bill in the Penn, opening Friday. The stellar Merivale role is played by Ronald Colman, and Kay Francis will be seen opposite the star.

Another Yule program that will begin Friday will bring Edward G. Robinson to the Warner screen in "Silver Dollar," in which he portrays one of the most spectacular figures of the Far West. Bebe Daniels will be seen as the leading woman of the cast.

* * *

The Davis and Regent will begin their new double-feature bill Saturday. The pictures will be "Little Orphan Annie" and "Men of America." The latter features Chic Sale while Mitzi Green has the title role in "Little Orphan Annie."

'Luxury Liner' Cast Completed

The completed cast of "Luxury Liner," B. P. Schulberg's second production for Paramount, includes George Brent, Zita Johann, Vivienne Osborne, Alice White, Verree Teasdale, C. Aubrey Smith, Frank Morgan, Billy Bevan, Theodor von Eltz, Barry Norton, Leni Stengel and Christian Rub. "Luxury Liner," from the novel by Gina Kaus, was prepared for the screen by Gene Markey and Kathryn Scola. Lothar Mendes is the director.

Noted Figures In Movie

H. A. W. Tabor, who gave Leadville its name, and went up from poverty to enormous wealth, and back down again, is the central figure of "Silver Dollar," picture coming Friday to the Warner with Edward G. Robison as its star. Bebe Daniels plays Baby Doe, an actress who became his wife in a Washington ceremony at a time when Tabor was United States Senator from Colorado, with President Arthur as one of the guests. It is said Tabor invited Mr. Arthur to have a secret drink to the health of the bride.

Another historic character in the film is that of Gen. Grant, at the opening of a grand theater Tabor built in Denver. On that occasion Emma Abbot, noted prima donna, was the star, and refused to sing because popping of champagne bottle corks annoyed her. William Jennings Bryan also is a figure in the picture.

Richard Bennett Cast In 'White Sister'

Richard Bennett has been given a supporting role in "The White Sister," in which Helen Hayes will be starred by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Bennett's latest screen role is in "If I Had a Million."

Moral Tone of 'East Lynne' Very High Indeed, But No Brass Rail

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Back to the brave days of 1862, when heroes were heroes, and villains were villains, and the wages of sin was death, the audience at the Pitt Theater was transported last night as "East Lynne" was played in hoopskirts and gay waistcoats while beer and pretzels were on sale at the bar of the foyer. Jean May appeared in the role out of which Lucille Western made fame and fortune, while Alden Chase acted Archibald Carlyle, once portrayed by Lawrence Barrett. Hunter Gardner was Sir Francis Levison, the hissable villain, while Peggy Dougherty was Joyce, the jewel of all serving maids. Back of the center door lay the pleasant park of East Lynne, bathed in golden sunshine or draped in pure fleecy snow, as the seasons changed. And over it all hovered the contented ghost of Mrs. Henry Wood, the novelist who discovered this continent of emotions surrounded by an ocean of briny tears.

Mr. Seibel

It is hard to realize nowadays that once upon a time this stilted stuff was taken for drama and literature. True, the players of other days did their best to cover up the artificiality and hokum by sincerity and byplay. And yet, the one thought remains—they must have been very great actors indeed to put this thing across! It makes Bartley Campbell seem a profound psychologist and Dion Boucicault a brilliant wit.

TURN ON THE TEARS

To see Jean May rocking the cradle as she spurns the villainous betrayer of her trust will rock the most hardened heart. To see her kneeling beside the deathbed of little Willie, disguised by dark spectacles so that only the keen eyes of Peggy Dougherty penetrate her incognito, will shake the equanimity of any cold-blooded worldling.

Who would be so callous as to suggest that little Willie Baltz looked so healthy and happy that Jean May probably strangled him to death with her volcanic affection, or that Madame Vine herself merely died of undernourishment because she always refuses food when it is offered her? We went there not to cavil, but to receive lessons in virtue and heroism and the graces of the British aristocracy. And we got them! We wept a little bit and laughed a little bit more and hissed the black scoundrel Levison as Charles Webster dragged him off to Australia to serve a life sentence.

ALL IN ATMOSPHERE

The aristocratic atmosphere was especially thick around Sam Flint as Lord Mount-Severn and Grayce Thorson as Barbara Hare—even without their resplendent raiment they would have been recognized as belonging to the caste of Vere de Vere. Even Hugh Banks with his disguise of a black beard and a farmhand's breeches could not throw us off the scent—in his veins rolled the ultramarine blood of many earls. Ella Ethridge played Miss Carlyle with biting hyperacidity and Roy Elkins was almost Thackerayan as Mr. Dill.

Everything would have delighted the fossil-hunter who sifts the ashes of the human heart for the lost virtues and vices of earlier ages, when heroes were heroes and villains were villains and the wages of sin was death.

In order to mitigate the agonies of the evening Clyde Schaefer sang "She's More to Be Pitied Than Censured," Peggy Dougherty excelled in "Just My Bill" and "Ready for Love," while Hugh Banks and Jean May furnished the moral of the whole performance by a touching duet, "No Wedding Bells for Me." And then everybody drowned his grief in some of the amber fluid dispensed at the bar.

Title Changed Twice

Samuel Goldwyn changed the name of the new Ronald Colman picture to "I Have Been Faithful . . ." instead of its stage original, "Cynara," because no two people could agree on the pronunciation of that name. Both are based on Ernest Dowson's famous poem,

"I have been faithful to thee, Cynara, in my fashion."

A New York wit wrote Mr. Goldwyn urging another change in the title for a similar reason. No two people could agree on the exact definition of being faithful!

And so "Cynara," which comes Friday to the Penn, was returned as its title.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

MAJESTIC HOTEL, TUNIS, NORTH AFRICA.—I was sick last night. I thought I was going to die. But I feel better now.

What I had—and still have, I guess—is probably something that we refer to as a case of the grippe. No more than a heavy cold, really. The fever rises, and then falls. You feel warm; then suddenly cold. And slight as the actual illness may be, you wonder if it's pneumonia—and if your time has actually arrived to be dumped into a wooden box as people who hated you bitterly in life weep copiously about you in death.

Perhaps I use bad judgment in writing a column about death. But I've used so much bad judgment in life that it doesn't make much difference. An extra daub of paint on a black background never affected a picture that had little value to begin with.

It's Tunis that has placed me in this mood. Tunis—and the fact that I'm still running a fever. If I were in New York, now, I'd laugh this thing off and insist upon going to the office. What's one cold more or less? You've had them since you were a kid and they always go away. At least—almost always.

But in Tunis—well, it's different somehow. I'm all alone in a cold hotel room. My director and my cameraman are off somewhere on the lonesome desert and they do not expect to return for two days. Disease is all around me. Blind men. Lame men. Filthy men. Sad men with incurable diseases. Dead men who walk.

Those things prey on your mind in a spot like this. You see so much disease that you can't help yourself.

No, I would not like to die in Tunis. When I go, I'd like it to be in New York. There, at least, there would be some semblance of friendliness.

Say, there's a laugh for you. Imagine dreaming of New York as a place in which to die! The city of pleasure; the goal of the country youth; the ambition of every stage-struck maiden; the one-way sign on the boulevard of success—New York. And here I sit, considering it only as the best place in which to die.

Surely, somewhere, the gods must grin . . .

Strange, the things that happened last night. Strange. I mean, as I sit here and consider them now. Consider, for example, the chambermaid, the valet and the waiter on this floor.

The chambermaid must be at least 55 years of age. Maybe she's more. She speaks no English whatsoever.

The valet has always seemed to be something of a sour man. He arrives when you summon him, but you can see that he would much rather be permitted to sleep in his little cubby-hole. He speaks a few words of English, but only when absolutely necessary.

The waiter has always been a waiter. If you give him a healthy tip, he bows low and serves you with all the ability at his command. If your tip it small, he tosses your food in front of you and leaves you in a hurry. The waiter has always been a waiter.

That's the way the servants on this floor always impressed me—until last night. Cold, hostile, scheming, planning—until last night. Listen:

I was sitting in my room, gazing out at the deserted streets and shivering. The valet entered and looked at me. My eyes felt very red. He looked at me again. And then, in his broken lingo, he said I should go to bed.

"I don't want to go to bed," I replied crossly. "Get out and leave me alone."

He left—but in a few minutes he was back with that funny old chambermaid. He stood in the doorway, but the woman walked over to me, placed an arm on my shoulder and pointed to the bed. I gazed up at the wrinkled face, and I couldn't be angry. I arose and took off my coat.

Things happened hapidly after that; so rapidly that I can't recall them all now. The chambermaid went out. While she was gone, the waiter who had always seemed so much of a waiter came into the room with a large drink of hot milk and brandy. He put it down on the table beside my bed, looked at me strangely—and left.

Then the maid returned again. In one hand she held what must pass for a hot water bottle in Tunis. It was copper instead of rubber. But it did feel awfully good when she raised the covers and placed it beside my feet.

In her other hand she held a pill. A large pill that I most certainly didn't want to take. She held out the pill and she extended the brandy and milk that the waiter had brought. I shook my head.

"No," I said. "I don't want that. You're sweet—but no."

The woman shook me. Damn it, that chambermaid actually shook me. I wanted to say something, but I couldn't. In the semi-darkness, the valet spoke.

"Take him," he said. "Woman know best."

I swallowed the pill, and I drank most of the brandy and hot milk in two or three gulps. I sank back again. I suddenly felt very sleepy. The maid drew the covers up about me, and then walked out. The valet lingered for a moment, his hand on the light.

"She do good," he murmured softly. "She's good woman. She say she have boy like you once. He die in war."

The light went out. And all I heard then were footsteps, echoing down the hall . . .

I was sick last night. I thought I was going to die. But I feel better now. This isn't such a bad world after all. . .

PITT QUINT SHOWS CLASS

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

MANY PROPOSED DEALS STRIKE SNAGS

THE NEW RECORD of 37 players shifted around among the major league baseball clubs in trades, with a total of 69 changes made in the rosters since the 1932 season ended, counting men released to the minors and others purchased and drafted from the same circle, does not take into account many attempted deals that failed to go through, including Pittsburgh's efforts to get another first-string pitcher.

Dazzy Vance

Brooklyn offered Dazzy Vance in a dozen combinations but none was acceptable to the other clubs. The Braves proposed Ben Cantwell for Vance, but it was declined. So was a bid of Ed Brandt for Freddie Lindstrom and Frank Hogan. The Phils refused to give Ray Benge for Hughey Critz. The A's would not trade Mickey Cochrane for what Cleveland offered, and the Indians rejected a counter proposition of Cochrane for Wesley Ferrell, just as they laughed at the Yanks' suggestion of Ben Chapman and Lyn Lary for Earl Averill. Connie Mack tried to get George Blaeholder and backed up when the Browns demanded George Earnshaw. The Dodgers failed to get Sam Leslie because they wouldn't give up Johnny Frederick. A difference of $1,500 in bonus ideas kept Brooklyn from signing Joe Judge. And those are only a few. The failures were as numerous as the dickers that were consummated.

OLD PIRATE MATES are confident that Gus Dugas will be hard to keep out of a regular berth in the Philadelphia outfield. They feel sure he will outhit Chick Fullis, and he has an advantage over Fred Brickell and Clifton Heathcote, his rival left-hand swingers, because southpaw pitchers do not bother him.

Mickey Finn is reported tickled over the deal that sends him to the same club, as it means a steady job, which he never has been able to win in the majors. Mickey is to be a fixture at second base. With a second sacker of Finn's ability, the Phils would have finished higher last season. Whether the plugging of that hole will count for a lot now, with Davis and Benge gone, is another question.

EVEN AFTER LOADING up with Walter Stewart, Earl Whitehill and Jack Russell, added to Bob Burke, Washington does not lead the American League in left-hand pitchers. The A's have five.

Bob Grove, Rube Walberg, Tony Freitas, Lew Krausse and Gowel Claset are the southpaws on Connie's reserve list. Connie would prefer to have another right-hander and not so many portsiders, but has not been able to land one.

ACCORDING TO OFFICIALS of the Braves, several other clubs were competing with them for the services of Dick Gyselman, the third baseman bought from the Missions. Though Al Wright, the other infielder bought by Boston at the same time, may have to be farmed out, Manager McKechnie thinks there is a chance that Gyselman, in spite of his youth, may become the Braves' regular third baseman. One Boston man goes so far as to pronounce him a better fielder than Traynor, "because he always stays on his feet and does not get down on his knees, as Pie often does," but the Pirate management so far has not offered to make a trade.

IT IS ONLY natural that Jock Sutherland should be building his offensive plans for the Rose Bowl game around an aerial attack, as no team facing Southern California has got very fat trying to gain through Ernie Smith and his mates in the giant Trojan line.

Ernie Smith

A great defense has been the factor in the success of the coast machine. Lacking offensive power because of having only green backfield material, the Jones eleven has won from all opposition through a string of nine games this year by holding every foe in check.

DURING THE ENTIRE regular season only two touchdowns were made against U. S. C., one by California and the other by Washington, and both of those scores came on long forward passes.

The Trojan line, with the great tackles, Smith and Brown, leading the way, has hurled back all rushing attempts. Seven opponents were held scoreless. They were Utah, Washington State, Oregon State, Loyola, Stanford, Oregon and Notre Dame. So the air appears to be Pitt's only hope.

IN SPITE OF the loss of four games during the last two seasons Notre Dame still can point to a record for a long period for which it would be hard to find a parallel in the major football ranks. In the last 16 years the Irish were defeated only 17 times. That's an average of only a shade more than one reverse to a season, a remarkable record, in view of the fact that schedules of the toughest kind were played as a rule. Knute Rockne's teams lost only 13 games in 14 seasons, and Hunk Anderson's elevens dropped four contests in two campaigns. In the 16-year stretch, against the 17 defeats, Notre Dame won 127 games and tied four.

THE GREATEST HOCKEY player of all time? Fans of the early days will continue to string along with Hod Stuart, but as far as the experience of Mike Rodden goes, and he has been a referee in the ice sport for 20 years, Allan (Scotty) Davidson stood alone.

And Davidson was a comparative youngster, only 22 when he went overseas as a bomber in 1914. One year later he was killed in action. Scotty, a native of Portsmouth, Ont., was a right winger, and played in turn for the Portsmouth Juveniles, the Frontenac Juniors, the Hamilton Seniors and Toronto.

"WHEN SCOTTY WAS with the Frontenac Juniors," Rodden told James Burchard, "they could have beaten almost every senior team in Canada. They once scored 32 goals in a game, and 15 or 20 came under the head of routine business. Davidson counted it a bad night if he didn't score five times.

Ralph Greenleaf

"He was abnormally strong, that boy, especially in his wrists. He packed as fast a shot as Charley Conacher does today, but was more accurate. He weighed about 195 pounds stripped, and was one inch under six feet in height. As the crowning and concluding effort of his brief but brilliant career he captained the Toronto club that won the Stanley Cup after the 1913-14 season."

PRACTICE METHODS IN billiards vary according to the style of game played. The balkline masters are hard workers. Willie Hoppe regularly devotes himself to four hours of practice daily, and Young Jake Schaefer, before and during a tournament or match, spends from six to eight hours at the table each day. But the pocket kings follow a totally different system. Many of them do little or no practice work during a tournament. They spend their time watching each other, studying every rival competitor in action to determine his formidable points and what are his weaknesses. "Only now and then when I want to get the proper touch for the championship pockets, which are slightly narrower than the usual pockets, do I devote any time to practice," says Ralph Greenleaf. Edwin Rudolph is the same. "I never practice to any extent during a tournament," he remarks. "Perhaps 10 or 15 minutes if it's a day when I'm not playing a match game, but rarely at any other time. I did put in an hour one day last week before my stroke was good and the balls were rolling well. However that's most unusual."

CARAS TO FACE GREENLEAF TONIGHT

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Andrew Ponzi's chances of winning the National pocket billiard championship are so faint as to be virtually indiscernible, but the chubby Philadelphian has gained a strangle hold on individual honors.

Today, with the tournament in its closing stages, he had chalked up the three highest runs, 73, 72, 71; turned in the two best games, four and six innings; figured in the tournament's closest match, a losing 125-to-111 duel with Jimmy Caras, and gained its most decisive victory, a 125-to-2 decision over Pasquale Natalie last night.

PONZI IN FORM

Virtually eliminated from the title chase when he dropped successive matches to Ralph Greenleaf and Caras, Ponzi returned to form with a bang in his duel with Natalie. The Philadelphian was in front all the way, established his new tournament high run mark of 73 in the twelfth inning, and then ran out in the fourteenth with an unfinished cluster of 37. Ponzi's victory was more decisive by one point than the 125-to-3 beating Natalie gave Caras several days ago.

Natalie's defeat dropped the Chicago veteran into fourth place, gave Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, undisputed possession of second place with five victories and one defeat, and boosted Caras into the third rung with six victories and two defeats. Ponzi stands fourth with five victories in eight starts.

Benny Allen, of Kansas City, and James Mills, of San Jose, Cal., achieved victories in their final tournament matches yesterday. Allen, beating Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, 125 to 56 in seven innings, wound up with five victories and four defeats. Mills defeated George Kelly, of Philadelphia, 125 to 81 in 17 innings for his second victory in nine starts.

GREENLEAF MEETS CARAS

Ralph Greenleaf, defending champion, who has won six successive victories, faces the youthful Caras tonight in the most important match of the day. The matinee program sends Kelly against Taberski and Rudolph against Natalie.

There was not much to the game once Ponzi got the balls holling in the twelfth inning for his high run record, the third time in the current tourney that he had topped 70.

Ponzi appeared well on his way to completing the game when he got a bad roll after his seventy-third point. The balls were well scattered, but he was forced to play on the eight ball, far down the table. He missed and left an opening for Natalie to click off six before leaving the six-ball hanging on the lip of the cup. The Quaker City cue artist got only two points on the thirteenth trip to the table, but took advantage of Natalie's ill-played scratch to run out the game in the fourteenth with an unfinished cluster of 37.

Not only did Ponzi set a new high-run record and turn in one of the fastest games of the tournament, but he held his opponent to the lowest score made by a loser. The standing:

Player	W.	L.
Erwin Rudolph, Cleveland	5	1
James Caras, Wilmington, Del.	4	2
Pasquale Natalie, Chicago	3	3
Andrew Ponzi, Philadelphia	3	3
Benny Allen, Kansas City	3	4
Frank Taberski, Schenectady, N. Y.	3	5
George Kelly, Philadelphia	2	5
James Mills, San Jose, Cal.	2	5
Walter Franklin, Kansas City	0	9

Young Corbett Wins Over Veteran Glick

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 20.—Young Corbett, of Fresno, contender for the welterweight championship, made a lasting impression in his return to local rings.

In a 10-round battle here last night against Joe Glick, cagy New York veteran, Corbett punched out a decisive victory.

The Fresno southpaw won every round, by varying margins. Glick was forced to call upon the experience gained in 11 years of campaigning to last out the fight.

Corbett weighed 149½ and Glick 147.

Bissonette Set For Comeback With Dodgers

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—So far as Del Bissonette is concerned the Brooklyn Dodgers can stop negotiations with Joe Judge, Washington first baseman, any time now.

Bissonette, recovering from a series of operations that kept him idle all last season and part of the 1931 campaign as well, says he will be in first rate shape by the time the spring training season comes around. He is sure he will do most of the Dodgers' first-basing in 1933.

Brooklyn has been trying to get Judge's name to a contract, fearing that Bissonette will not be able to play.

King Tut Beaten By Andy Callahan

BOSTON, Dec. 20.—Andy Callahan, who holds two New England ring titles, also sports a victory over King Tut, Minneapolis welterweight star.

In the Boston Garden's 10-round main bout last night, Callahan won by a decisive margin over Tut. Tut found Callahan's southpaw attack difficult to figure and was unable to carry a single round.

Brouillard Loses To Jimmy Smith

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—Jimmy Smith, local middleweight, owns a victory over a former champion today and he's proud of it.

Fighting off an early rush, Smith last night whipped Lou Brouillard, of Worcester, Mass., former welterweight champion, in 10 rounds. Both weighed 153 pounds.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: WOODEN "STOCKINGS"—Even as Santa Claus, many of our modern Christmas customs were brought here from Holland. In accordance with their native habits, the children of the settlers of New Amsterdam would place their wooden shoes on the doorsteps of their houses expecting the Christmas Saint to fill them with gifts during the "night before Christmas." With the disappearance of the wooden shoe in New York, the modern "stocking" made its appearance.

TOMORROW—THE WIZARD OF WICHITA.

LOCAL PASSERS FACE TESTS

Three star independent basketball attractions are on the list for this city Thursday night, with the Goldenson Vanities, crack girls' team, the J. P. Rooneys and the Y. M. H. A. quintets playing hosts to out-of-town opponents.

The Vanities will meet the Struthers, O., girls on the South Side Market House floor. The Rooneys will entertain the Akron Firestones on the Allegheny Y. M. C. A. court and the Y. M. H. A. meets the Pennzoils, of Cleveland, on the Bellefield avenue floor.

In independent games last night, the Willigs routed the Falcons, 43 to 35 in a West Penn loop fray; St. Johns took over St. John the Baptist, 33 to 19; Tarentum Y defeated the Y. M. H. A., 30 to 20.

In scholastic battles, the Pitt freshmen defeated Dormont, 39 to 29; Coraopolis upset Leetsdale, 18 to 13; Arnold Prep won from Forest Hills, 29 to 9, and McKeesport trimmed Norwin, 38 to 35.

SPORT VIGNETTES

The major league magnates have the right idea in making wholesale trades this winter . . . They will serve to stir up interest among the fans and will lend new color to the various teams . . . The acquisition of Freddie Lindstrom by the Pirates is a case in point . . . The fans have something to talk about as they look ahead to another season . . . The same story is true throughout both major circuits. . . . The fans do not like to stand pat on teams that fail to win pennants . . . They want their club owners to try for better things, and there is nothing like acquiring new players to stir the flame of hope in their breasts.

Bunny Buntach

A local boxing fan made the crack the other day that the sport would be in a better way here this winter, despite the hard times, if there were more "color" in the ranks of the fighters and managers . . . He says a lot of life was taken out of the game in Pittsburgh when the effervescent Red Mason moved to Chicago, and he's right . . . The most colorful personality in the local ranks at this time undoubtedly is Bunny Buntach, Braddock manager of boxers . . . He has a faculty for stirring up talk by wrangling with the promoters and "ribbing" rival managers and fighters and in other ways providing the spark from which comes the ballyhoo upon which the sport thrives.

Harry Stuhldreher, Villanova coach, and member of the Four Horsemen backfield at Notre Dame, spoke a mouthful when he said in a recent speech that the so-called "de-emphasization" of college football was gaining only one end and that was in depriving many young athletes from obtaining an education by the only means at their disposal . . . Scholarships are awarded by colleges and universities everywhere on the basis of academic excellence and nothing is thought of it, yet hands are thrown up in horror at the very thought of an athlete obtaining his education by giving something in return.

The colleges do not mind attracting large enrollments through strong athletic teams and their attendant free advertising, yet they live in terror of being pointed out as institutions which make it worth the athlete's while by giving him an opportunity to earn his education by dying for Alma Mater . . . There is nothing wrong about the system except the hyprocisy with which it is cloaked.

Full many an athlete, after a glamorous career as a collegian or an amateur performer for a club, finds himself in the position of Eddie Tolan, the Negro sprint hero of the Olympic Games, who has been promised a position on the city payroll of Detroit following the discovery when he was presented an embossed resolution of City Council expressing the municipality's pride in his achievements that what he needed more than anything else was a job . . . As one of the Councilmen said at the time, "You can't eat gold medals, can you, Eddie?"

The amateur officials who wax fat on their jobs through the efforts of the athletes are the first to crack down on the latter at the first hint of any reward for the athletes, yet, if the truth were known, there is a lot of professionalism, or near-professionalism, all along the line . . . So-called amateur tennis and golf stars trade on their reputations to sell bonds and commodities or write articles for magazines and newspapers

'POP GREATEST' --HOLLENBACK

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Rockne, Haughton, Yost, Stagg and Warner—the greatest of these is Warner, declares William M. (Big Bill) Hollenback, old-time Pennsylvania gridiron star, who has played, coached, scouted and officiated football for nearly 30 years.

Hollenback, preparing to welcome Glenn S. Warner to Temple University, where Pop takes over the football coaching reins next year, declared:

"You can trace every development that has gone to make what is now called college football to Warner."

In picking a "Hollenback's All-Warner Team," composed of gridiron stars coached and developed by the "Old Fox," Hollenback said:

"That in all his years of football, he thinks Andy Smith's teams had the best interference. Percy Haughton's Harvard teams the finest timing, Knute Rockne's the greatest perfection of plays and precision, but Pop Warner's teams combined all these specialties and went even further—they staged the unexpected."

Hollenback's All-Warner team follows:

Ends, Exendine and Gardiner, Carlisle; tackles, Wheelock, Carlisle, and Thornhill, Pittsburgh; guards, Sutherland, Pittsburgh, and Thompson, Cornell; center, Peck, Pittsburgh; quarterback, Johnson or Mt. Pleasant, Carlisle; halfbacks, Thorpe, Carlisle, and Nevers, Stanford; fullback, McLaren, Pittsburgh.

Princeton Passers Win Over Harvard

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—A Princeton basketball team came to the home of Harvard for the first time in 23 years to repeat the victory of the Tiger five a generation ago. The score was 40 to 20.

PANTHERS MAKE FINE RECORD ON TRIP

By JESS CARVER

Dr. Red Carlson's Pitt Panthers (the basketball ones) are back home today after their initial road trip of the year and their annual invasion of the Mid-West, which in years past, has been their favorite prowling territory. They returned home with a mark of two tough ones won against one lost, and so for the campaign, have three victories and one setback.

Now they'll rest up for their next test, an important one, too, with the crack Purdue Big Ten entry here December 31.

In the first two games of their jaunt, last week, they first lost to Northwestern when their marksmanship went back on 'em after they had shown superiority over the Wildcats in all other departments of the game, and then rubbed Minnesota out of the unbeaten list in decisive fashion.

WON IN OVERTIME

Last night, in Indianapolis, the Panthers evidenced fine staying qualities in beating Butler University, always a tough nut to crack, in an extra period. Tied at the end of the regulation playing period, the Panthers went out and got themselves an eight-point advantage in the overtime, winning, 38 to 30.

The Pitt attack was decidedly off in the first half last night, the locals being limited to two field goals. They trailed by four points at the intermission. Both quintets went to it fast and furious in the second half, and just before the final gun, Russ Ochsenhirt let one go from outside to tie the count at 29-all.

It was a cinch for the Panthers in the extra period. Don McCamant, Skippy Hughes and Don Smith popped field goals in rapid succession and Ochsenhirt added one foul and Charley Hughes two to ice the victory. Meanwhile, Butler was held to a single foul.

HUGHES SHOWS CLASS

Young Skippy Hughes is proving himself a real find. Only a sophomore, he already has beaten out his brother, Charley for a starting post and Charley looked like a pretty capable ball player last year. In winning two out of three tough ones on the road, the Panthers have served notice on Chick Davies, of the Dukes, and Maxie Hannum, of Tech, that they will not be the easy marks the Dukes and Tartans figured they would, and that they'll be in the battle for city honors right up to their classic ears. Last night's lineup:

Pitt—39.	Fg.	Ft.	Pt.	Butler—30.	Fg.	Ft.	Pt.
Smith, f	1	4	6	Miller, f	3	2	8
W. Hughes, f	2	2	6	Withrow, f	1	0	2
Bond, c	0	3	3	Reissner, f	0	1	1
C. Hughes, g	2	1	5	Proffitt, c	2	1	5
Ochsenhirt, g	2	3	7	Demmory, c	3	1	7
McCamant, g	5	1	11	Parris, g	1	0	2
				Baird, g	4	1	9
Totals	12	14	38	Totals	12	6	30

Score at half—Butler 13, Pittsburgh 8. Personal fouls—Smith 2, Bond, C. Hughes 3, Ochsenirt, McCamant 2, Miller 3, Withrow 2, Proffitt 4, Demmory 4, Parris 3, Baird.

Referee—Miller (Indianapolis); umpire—Feezle (Indianapolis).

TECH ALUMNI PLEASED

Although the passing of Bob Waddell is regretted generally, all concerned appear happy and satisfied over the selection of Howard Harpster as Bob's successor as head football coach at Tech.

The chances are that with Harpster in the saddle, and promised a free rein, that Carnegie will return to the spring practice idea. Harpster has been in favor of spring drills, and has held 'em annually at Geneva. With the schedule that confronts him next fall, it will be necessary for him to get a line on his prospects as early as possible, for the new coach will find his work cut out for him. He loses some valuable material from this year's team, including George Kavel and Hooks Sample. The loss of these lads will be felt keenly.

Carnegie alumni are cheering the selection of the former all-America quarterback of their alma mater as coach, and have promised him their whole-hearted support and co-operation.

TITANS CHANGE CARD

Westminster has found it necessary to make some changes in its basketball schedule. After the defeat at the hands of Edinboro Saturday night, the Titans wished they'd canceled that one a week ago.

Illinois Wesleyan has found it necessary to cancel its scheduled appearance in New Wilmington, December 29, so Youngstown Y. M. C. A. College has been booked for December 28. Edinboro will be met in a return game January 7, and Case will be played December 31. The revised schedule follows:

December 28—Youngstown College, at home; December 31—Case, at home; January 3—Duquesne, at Pittsburgh; January 7—Edinboro, at home; January 13—Grove City, at Grove City; January 17—Waynesburg, at home; January 18—Geneva, at Beaver Falls; January 21—Allegheny, at Meadville; January 28—Thiel, at home; February 1—Thiel, at Greenville; February 4—Duquesne, at Beaver Falls; February 8—Bethany, at home; February 10—Allegheny, at home; February 14—Geneva, at home; February 17—Glenville, at home; February 21—Bethany, at Bethany; February 22—Waynesburg, at Waynesburg; February 28—St. Thomas, at Scranton; March 1—Freeport, at Freeport, N. INFIELDER RELEASED

SQUAD TO HEAD FOR ARIZONA TONIGHT

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 20.—Pitt's Golden Panthers will get down to serious work this afternoon on the home field of the Mustangs of Southern Methodist University. They arrived in Dallas early this morning. Jock Sutherland plans to put his charges through a real workout here today, for it will be the last one until Thursday, when the team arrives in Tucson.

The Pitt party is quartered at the Dallas Athletic Club, and will not leave for Tucson until tonight.

The journey so far has been uneventful. The long ride from Pittsburgh to Dallas was broken only at St. Louis, where, thanks to the engineer pushing his iron speed harder than usual, the Panthers had a half hour layoff.

STOP IN ST. LOUIS

The half hour was used up in a short calisthenic drill, after which the gridders hopped out to the street level, took one look at the city of St. Louis, and then went right back to the waiting room, the concensus of opinion being that there wasn't much they could do to improve the town in their short stay.

Most of the players did get a kick, however, out of seeing the Mississippi jammed with ice from shore to shore, although Si Meridith tried to make it appear like it was old stuff to him.

Coach Sutherland, in an interview, predicted that his team was doomed to defeat. The Pitt coach believes the Trojans are too powerful.

TROJANS PLAN SURPRISE

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Coach Howard Jones, University of Southern California's grid generalissimo, called his Trojans for another secret session today to cope with the Pittsburgh situation which will arise in the Rose Tournament football game January 2.

Followers of the unbeaten and untied Trojans would not be surprised to see the style of play considerably revamped for the Panthers, although there has been no indication from behind the locked gates as to just what the changes, if any, might be.

Last year the Southern California ends bobbed up with a rushing type of defensive game against Tulane after depending mostly on waiting tactics through the regular schedule.

Each succeeding big game the men of Troy have played this year has revealed some change which was intended to throw the opponent off the track of the usual play revealed in scouting reports. There was little doubt but what a change of assignments has been ordered for Pitt.

With Southern California's knowledge of the Panther attack somewhat sketchy because of a lack of first hand information on the team, Jones may concentrate more on developing a more determined offense and let that stand in a large degree for a defense as well.

EASTERN SQUAD HEADS WEST

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The all-Eastern football squad, which will tackle a team of selected Western players in the annual Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children benefit game in San Francisco, January 2, today is en route to Palo Alto, where it will be whipped into trim by Coaches Dick Hanley, of Northwestern, and Andy Kerr, of Colgate.

Yesterday, the boys received equipment, took a short drill, attended a dinner and left for the Pacific Coast.

Only All-America tackle Joe Kurth, of Notre Dame, of the squad selected by Coaches Hanley and Kerr, was missing, but he will join the outfit at Palo Alto, having remained on the Coast after the Notre Dame-Southern California game.

The workout was brief, being restricted to the fundamentals of the Warner system, which is employed by both coaches. The athletes went through formations on a snow-covered gridiron, and after a quick look the coaches expressed pleasure at the talent available. Hanley said:

"I think we have the best backfield since we started coaching the team five years ago. In Harry Newman, Pug Rentner and Gil Berry, we have three of the best passers of the season, and it would be hard to find a better pair of fullbacks than Bart Viviano and Roy Horstmann."

LATE JOHN GRUBER AT WORK AS OFFICIAL SCORER OF PITTSBURGH GAMES, POST HE HELD CONTINUOUSLY FOR TWO SCORE YEARS

There'll be a vacant chair in the press box at Forbes Field during the coming baseball season, for John H. Gruber, beloved dean of local sports writers, has passed on to his reward. For 40 years he had been the official scorer of the Pittsburgh games. Exclusive Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture above shows him (No. 1) at his task of calling hits and errors during the 1932 season. Flanking him are two other veterans of the local fraternity of baseball writers, James J. Long (No. 2), of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, and Ed W. Balinger, of the Post-Gazette (No. 3). Members of the local chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America will view the remains of their colleague in a body at his late home in West View this evening. Tomorrow evening, at 7 o'clock, during the weekly radio program of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, over WCAE, Sam Watters, secretary of the Pirates and longtime friend of Gruber, will pay tribute to him on behalf of the baseball writers. Funeral services will be held Thursday morning in St. Athanasius Church.

ROOT PROBABLE YALE COACH

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—With Yale University in Christmas recess, its student body scattering homeward for the holidays, athletic offices closed and sports at a standstill, few Yale men remain here to speculate on a successor to Mal Stevens as head coach in football.

Stevens' resignation, announced by Prof. Malcolm Farmer, chairman of the board of control, Saturday, was not followed by any inkling as to a possible selection of his successor. It has been stated with authority, however, that the new coach's name might be given out this week-end.

Among Yale men there was persistent clinging to the name of Reggie Root, freshman coach, in discussions. There was only incidental reference to the name of any other Yale man. Tad Jones' name came into the talk, but the weight of opinion was on Root.

PEDEN AT CHICAGO?

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The list of football coaches "guessed" into line as possible successors to Amos Alonzo Stagg at the University of Chicago, continues to grow.

The latest hot rumor has Don Peden, former University of Illinois star, and for the past eight years coach at Ohio University, as the likely successor to the Grand Old Man—but without any comment from Thomas N. Metcalf, new Maroon director of athletics, who will make the selection.

Coach Ousted, Probe As Haskell Looms

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—A private inquiry into the failure of the Haskell Institute Athletic Association to renew the contract of Frank H. McDonald, athletic director, is being made by Senator Cutting (Rep.), of New Mexico, because of reports the action resulted from McDonald having been active in Kansas Democratic circles prior to the elections.

and nothing is said about it until there is a protest . . . Then the lid is off . . . Seemingly, the sin is not in committing the crime, but in being found out . . . This observation, coupled with that on the hypocrisy of our colleges, may read like treason, but, if it does, it goes as it lies, and you'll have to make the most of it.

When the Great Scorer checks up the box score on the life of the late John H. Gruber, dean of local baseball writers, and official scorer here for 40 years, He'll set it down as a well-played game, with lots of hits and very few errors . . . John had that human touch that endeared him to his friends . . . Several years ago he was tendered a testimonial banquet by his fellow scribes at which he was paid high tribute by some of the biggest figures in sportdom . . . A sturdy soul, who carried on to the last of his 79 years, Gruber's place will be hard to fill, especially in the hearts of his co-workers . . . One of our last fond memories of him is of his presence at a picnic held by the local scribes on a Sunday afternoon last summer . . . Fred Alger was drumming out popular airs on a wheezy piano, Ed Balinger was playing accompaniment on a flute, Charley Doyle was jigging and tapping, and all of the others were singing . . . A happy fraternity together for a day . . . And Uncle John the life of the party as he stopped the show to sing a few old German ballads in which those who knew the words and music joined.

GENE TUNNEY TELLS STORY OF LIFE

Mustered Out of the Service—Training With Bartley Madden and Meeting a Friend in Bernard Gimbel

By GENE TUNNEY
Retired Heavyweight Champion

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

I boxed exhibitions with Bob Martin on the Rhine trip. It was agony. My hand again was swollen to the size of a ham. After giving about 10 shows we returned to Paris to prepare for the Inter-Allied games.

After considerable treatment of the sick paw, it showing little improvement, I decided not to go into the Inter-Allied games. This caused considerable dismay among the officers and directors, but I had a plan now and I was not going to jeopardize it by doing anything I considered foolish. While living at Clignancourt barracks, outside the old Paris wall, with the bokers, wrestlers and other athletes who were going to take part in the Inter-Allied games, I met many prominent athletes, some of whom have been my friends since.

Gene Tunney

Pat Ryan, the hammer thrower, was there. Pat advised me to drink four pints of Bass' ale a day to get big and strong. The track and field men were a great gang, frolicking always. The wrestlers and boxers were lodged together. They followed the same diet, trained in the same Paris gymnasium and thought in the same way. I met Eddie Egan there; he was an exception.

DECLINES YALE BID

Eddie later became a prominent Yale boxer, winning the intercollegiate, the national American amateur heavyweight championship, the British intercollegiate and amateur light-heavyweight and heavyweight championships, and the Olympic light-heavyweight championship in 1920. At this time at the "Stade Pershing" he won the inter-Allied middleweight championship. Eddie and I became intimate friends during our two months at Clignancourt. When we took leave of each other in July, 1919, Eddie said to me:

"Gene, when you get back home why don't you come to Yale with me?"

I replied:

"Eddie, I won't have any time for Yale. I am going to win the heavyweight championship of the world."

Dempsey had won the championship at Toledo some 10 days before. It is amusing now to hear Eddie tell the story and what his reactions were when I made that remark in such a matter-of-fact way. Eddie had been a great admirer of Jack Dempsey from Jack's early Colorado days.

SPENDS BONUS MONEY

After waiting around Quantico 30 days for my service record to come from France, I was finally discharged and given the bonus of $60—and how I needed that $60! There was a suit to be bought.

Much to my surprise, the suit cost me $40.

"Before I left for service the the same suit would have cost about $15," I observed to the salesman.

It was necessary to get a hat and a pair of civilian shoes. These purchases made, I was again flat.

When I returned to Greenwich Village it somehow did not seem to have the old "folksy" atmosphere. Though many of my former companions were back from war and the physical appearance of the Village had been unaltered there was a strangeness about everything. Adjustments were necessary, but I did not know where.

After about a month of roaming the neighborhood renewing old acquaintances and visiting old friends, I decided I must do something about my career. I had to find a gymnasium in which to train. I must find some fellows with whom to spar.

SYNOPSIS

Thus far, the author has described his strenuous boyhood, New York fight club activities, and battles paving the way towards the A. E. F. ring championship in France . . . Office boy, ship company rate clerk, life saver, and now a full-fledged U. S. Marine, Tunney travels to Paris for "fame and glory" . . . winnig the heavyweight title on April 26, 1919 . . . Decides to defeat Dempsey some day!

But, first of all, I must get a gymnasium outfit — shoes, trunks, sweater, gloves, punching bag, skipping rope, etc. All this cost money. I had none. It was all right to live at home with my people and take the price of a theater ticket from my mother now and then, but I could not get up the nerve to ask her to advance me enough money to buy myself a training outfit.

MEETS SAMMY KELLY

Moreover, at this period my mother was very insistent upon my going into some kind of industry and following a legitimate business career, as she put it. I did not disclose my plan to Mother. Eventually Sammy Kelly sent for me. He was a former featherweight boxer from Greenwich Village, one of the Terry McGovern school, then associated with Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the New York Giants. Sammy heard about my achievements in France from a mutual friend. Being interested, he sent a friend, Jack Clancy, to ask me to come up to Saratoga and have a talk about my plans for a career. I had never met Kelly and upon inquiry heard he was a fine sportsman and a great judge of boxers.

I proceeded to Saratoga. Sammy took me out to Tom Luther's, where Frank Moran, owner of the celebrated "Mary Ann," trained for his important matches. I had dinner at Luther's and talked with "Uncle Tom," who was anxious to have me set up training quarters there. I did not tell Luther why I could not use his camp at that time. The beauty and restful atmosphere of the place attracted me, and I secretly hoped some day to be able to afford such training quarters.

REGRETS CONFIDENCE

While talking with Kelly and becoming very enthusiastic about future prospects, I naively told Sam of my plan. A half-hour later, as we were standing against the bar in Tom Luther's White Sulphur Springs Hotel, Sammy, upon introducing me to a race horse owner, said:

This man, whose name I do not recall, looked benignly upon me and presently said:

"Well, son, you have picked for yourself about the toughest job I know of."

I was somewhat embarrassed and deeply regretted having revealed my ambition to Kelly.

As the original layout for our new partnership, Kelly advanced me $100 with which I was to purchase a training outfit. I thought $20 would be sufficient and asked him to give me that instead. He refused to consider a "recapitalization," saying that any fighter of his must have an outfit costing at least $100. I bought a ticket back to New York and pinned the change of the hundred-dollar bill in the watch pocket of my trousers.

The day after returning to New York I went to a sporting goods house and purchased what what I thought was the necessary outfit for a boxer of my new standing.

GETS TRAINING QUARTERS

Now that I had the training clothes, the problem left was to find a gymnasium. I had heard of Grupp's and Stillman's, but, not knowing anyone in either place, I felt rather backward about going. Several days later—the Saratoga racing season having closed—Sammy Kelly arrived in New York and, learning of my inability to locate a gymnasium, called up Jack Denning, who was boxing instructor at the City Athletic Club on West Fifty-fourth street. He inquired of Denning whether it would be possible for me to come over and spar a little with him at the club. Denning generously extended an invitation to me after he had got permission to do so from the chairman of the club's athletic committee. This permission was necessary because it was a private club. Jack Denning had been a very clever middleweight several years earlier and had, on one occasion, defeated Mike Gibbons.

BOXES WITH MADDEN

Presently Denning discovered he was unable to combine boxing with me and instructing the club members. He, therefore, brought over to the gymnasium a heavyweight who, though he had several important victories to is credit among the leading heavyweights, was somewhat of an in-and-outer due to his methods of training.

This heavyweight, Bartley Madden, and I worked together for several months. I was doubly fortunate in being given permission to train at the City A. C., for it was my good luck to make the friendship of a man who later was of immeasurable help as I came up through the ranks. One day after a three-round match with Madden, I was introduced to Bernard F. Gimbel by Jack Denning. Mr. Gimbel, commenting favorably upon my style, said he would be at the gymnasium earlier the next day to do a little sparring with me and would point out what he thought were flaws in my technique.

I later found Bernard Gimbel to be as good a judge of boxing and boxers as anyone I have met in or out of the profession. Unlike other good judges, he could actually execute his own theories. During the next several months his advice and pointers polished down many of the rough edges of my style. Later in my career he was of considerable help in many ways. Though I was not hungry during these months of active training at the City A. C., I had no money. I was what could be termed a very poor young man, and realized it.

Tomorrow's chapter will describe how Tunney outpointed Dan O'Dowd and knocked out Bob Pierce late in 1919 when under Billy Roche's management.

INJURY COSTS WILSON BOUT

Jackie Wilson, local Negro bantamweight, is nursing a severely injured ear today and has a technical knockout defeat charged against him.

Wilson, meeting Ross Fields, of Cleveland, in New Castle last night, stepped away to an apparently safe lead in the first six rounds, but suffered a cut ear that became so serious that in the tenth and final round, with the member all but severed, Referee Red Robinson stepped in and stopped the fight, awarding Fields the verdict by a technical knockout.

Denver Evens Count With Davis-Elkins

DENVER, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Showing a marked improvement in form, Denver University defeated the barnstorming Davis and Elkins Hurricanes, 38 to 24, here last night to even the two-game series with the West Virginians. Davis and Elkins won the first game Saturday, 26 to 24.

Denver played aggressively, discarding to a large extent the deliberate style which marked their first game and outscored the West Virginians 17 goals to eight.

KING WHIPPED BY YAROSZ IN RETURN GO

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Making a rushing fight of it from the start, Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, left no doubt last night that he is the master of Jack King, Little Rock (Ark.) welterweight, in their 10-round return bout at the Arena, on the North Side. Yarosz also won their first clash, in the same ring, several weeks ago, but that time on the referee's decision after the judges had split, and many spectators, including this writer, strung along with King as the real, if not official, winner.

With Yarosz forcing the going virtually all of the way, instead of starting off cautiously, as in their initial meeting, there never was any question of his superiority last night. He carried every round except the fifth and seventh, which went to King by slight margins, and he was trying hard for a knockout in the last two rounds. At times he volleyed rights to the jaw with such rapidity that it was amazing that King was able to keep his feet under the onslaughts.

ROUGH STUFF MARS BOUT

It was a good battle for action, with King always trying right down to the final bell in the face of an irresistible oncoming force. He was not disgraced, merely beaten by an opponent who has not lost a decision in his entire professional career.

The fight was marred by a lot of needless rough stuff on the part of Yarosz in the first four rounds. He kept muggins and using his head and hitting on the breaks and in other ways transgressing the rules, much to the disgust of all but his partisan rooters. It finally got so bad that the booing of his tactics was almost continuous, and one fan twice threw his newspaper into the ring in protest. Referee Al Grayber took cognizance of the situation at the end of the fourth round and went to Ted's corner and told him to eliminate the fouling. Curiously, Yarosz fought much better without it as he swept on to decisive victory.

Yarosz weighed 150½ pounds and King 148½ at 3 p. m.

GORNICK BEATS McHALE

Marty Gornick, of Whitaker, 140½, won the referee's decision over Marty McHale, in the eight-round semi-final, in which McHale was the aggressor, but Gornick the more effective puncher. McHale suffered the only knockdown, for a count of eight, in the fourth round. Judge Frank Brown voted for McHale, Judge Frank Perris for Gornick and Referee Joe Zivic also for Gornick.

Al Farone, West End featherweight, outclassed the veteran Joe Elrene, of the North Side, in the second bout, and it was stopped at the end of the first round by Referee Al Grayber when Elrene returned to his corner with a badly cut eye.

Charley Burns, of St. Michaels, handed Bobby Rowe, Negro southpaw bantam of the East End, a lacing in the six-round opener. He started off by flooring Rowe for nine in the opening round.

Between Rounds

George Godfrey and Walter Cobb have been rematched for Philadelphia, Thursday night of next week.

It's Dave Shade vs. Frankie Goosby at the Arena, on the North Side, Friday night, with Charley Baxter and Eddie Hebner in the eight-round semi-final.

GRUBER BURIAL PLANS SET

St. Athanasius' Church, Chalfonte avenue, West View, will be the scene of an impressive funeral service Thursday morning at 9 o'clock when a high mass of requiem will be sung over John H. Gruber, Pittsburgh Pirate official scorer and the dean of Pittsburgh sports writers. The veteran journalist died at the family residence, 50 Fordham avenue, Sunday night.

The National League of Professional Baseball clubs, which Gruber served so faithfully in an official capacity for 40 years, sent a floral tribute to the Gruber home. The departed writer was a warm friend of John A. Heydler, president of the National League. The Pittsburgh Baseball Club, through President William E. Benswanger, also honored the memory of its longtime employe with flowers.

Harry M. Stevens, famous concessionaire of the Polo Grounds, Ebbets Field, Braves Field and other ball parks of the East, today telephoned from his New York home to Vice President Samuel E. Watters, of the Pittsburgh club, requesting Waters to send a big wreath of flowers to the Gruber home in Stevens' name.

John Gruber and Harry Stevens were contemporaries. There was little difference in their ages, and when Stevens came from his Niles (O.) home to take over the concessions at Exposition Park, Gruber was getting in his first licks as official scorer. Through the 40 intervening years they have been close friends and Stevens was much affected by the passing of his pal. In his talk with Watters, he declared:

"John Gruber was a man worthy of the finest things you can say for any man."

The pallbearers will be Fred S. Wertenbach, chairman of Pittsburgh Chapter, Baseball Writers of America; James J. Long, Havey J. Boyle, John L. Herman, Charles J. Doyle and Edward F. Ballinger, close friends of the departed and members of the writers' organization. Mr. Gruber was a charter member of the body and the first chairman of Pittsburgh chapter. He took an active part in the meetings of the local chapter and was the honored one on the occasion of the big banquet given by the Pittsburgh chapter in 1929.

Following is the list of honorary pallbearers: Judge F. P. Patterson, William E. Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club; Sam Watters, secretary and treasurer of the Pirates; Joseph N. Mackrell, register of wills; Ralph S. Davis, former Gov. John K. Tener, Harry Keck, Carl W. Shatto, Daniel E. Benjamin, Tom Birks, James Murray, Regis Welsh, Richard Guy, James M. MacAfee, W. A. White, Jess Carver, Julius Levin, George Jennings, William Schragen, Joseph F. Huhn and William J. Farrell.

Mrs. H. C. Kentzel, a daughter of Mr. Gruber who resides in Knoxville, Tenn., started for Pittsburgh upon hearing of her father's sickness. She arrived yesterday.

Having shelved its proposed return match between Tony Herrera and Tony Falco for a Tommy Freeman-Ted Yarosz show Christmas afternoon, Motor Square Garden was holding the bag when Yarosz' manager refused to sign after Ted defeated Jack King at the Arena last night. King also is out because Ted beat him quite convincingly the first time. Manuel Quintero, who is in town, holds a win over Freeman, and would like to fight him again, but it is felt there would not be enough interest in such a bout between out-of-town fighters to justify wasting a holiday date on it. So what?

Billy Smendinger is director of the amateur boxing show to be held by the Mt. Oliver and Knoxville Business Men's Association for the needy families of the Hilltop in G. B. U. Hall, Mt. Oliver, tomorrow night. The card: Bill Schuerin vs. Carl Berg, Al Quall vs. Vince Broadhag, Jimmy Campbell vs. Jackie Fields, Jackie Peters vs. Bill Zurich, Alex Mancini vs. Tubby Mills, Floyd Walcott vs. John Morock, Tommy Caslon vs. Ray Eberle and Frank Karnash vs. Jimmy Bradley.

STRUB LACES BOJARSKI

ERIE, Pa., Dec. 20.—Frankie Bojarski's reign as ruler of the Erie lightweights is over, at least for the present.

In a slashing 10-round battle last night, staged for the benefit of the Erie Baseball Fans' Association, Maxie Strub, Bojarski's local rival, won the unanimous verdict of the referee and two judges over Bojarski after a torrid battle. The proceeds of the show will go toward paying off the deficit of the 1932 baseball season.

Strub won the fight with vicious counter-punching, driving solid rights to Bojarski's heart as the farmer boy southpaw kept driving in.

Bojarski had a wide edge in only one round, the eighth, when he opened a cut over Strub's right eye and administered a bad beating to Maxie as the latter backed around the ring. Strub weighed 136¾ and Bojarski 138½.

FOXX LEADER IN HOME RUNS

A'S SLUGGER ACCOUNTS FOR MOST RUNS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Babe Ruth continues to draw more bases on balls than any other batter in the American League. Official figures for this year, released today, disclose that although there may be pretenders for his home run honors, the Bambino still is feared more than any contemporary swatter of his circuit.

Ruth was given 130 free trips to first base. Jimmy Foxx, who stole the home run show last season, was second in free transportation, with 116 bases on balls.

FOXX PACKS PUNCH

The Athletics' star, nevertheless, led the league in driving in runs. Jimmy drove in 169 tallies. Fourteen batters batted in more than 100 runs. Joe Cronin, former Pirate, now the manager of the Senators, was in the select list.

Foxx struck out no less than 96 times, but he was second in this respect, Outfielder Campbell, of the Browns, whiffing 104 times. Joe Sewell, of the Yanks, noted for his accuracy at the plate, fanned only three times in 124 games. The records:

BABE DECLARED U. S.' BEST

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—There is no doubt about Babe Didrikson's place as the outstanding American girl athlete of 1932, regardless of any doubt existing as to her future as an amateur competitor.

With some belated additions to the voting, Miss Didrikson today leads all rivals in the second annual Associated Press poll, as the outstanding feminine athlete of the year, with 81 votes out of a total of 215 cast.

The Texas girl nearly doubled the total of her nearest rival, Helene Madison, world champion free style swimmer, who finished with 45 votes. The tennis queen, Helen Wills Moody, placed third with 24 votes, and Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, new National golf champion, won fourth place by a narrow margin over Eleanor Holm, of New York, best of the backstroke mermaids.

Hay Quits Job As Detroit Pilot

DETROIT, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—George Hay has dropped the managerial reins of the Olympics, Detroit's International Hockey League club, to become center for the Red Wings, the Detroit National League entry.

Carson Cooper, who figured in the trade that brought John Ross Roach to the Red Wings, will become pilot of the Olympics.

NEW HAVERFORD FOE

HAVERFORD, Pa., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—For the first time in its history, Haverford College will play an intersectional football game next fall as a special feature of its centenary celebration. Arrangements have been made, it was announced, to play Earlham College of Richmond, Ind., here early next October. Like Haverford, Earlham is a Quaker institution.

STUHLEY STOPPED

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Sammy (Kid) Slaughter, Terre Haute middleweight, knocked out Young Stubley, Kewanee, Ill., in 28 seconds here last night. The match had barely started when Slaughter landed a solid right squarely on Stuhley's jaw and he went down for the count.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

By GIB MARSH

The hunting season on all game, small and big, in Pennsylvania has ended for the current year. Raccoons may be sought until January 1 in some counties, while in other counties the season closed last Thursday. The hunters of the Keystone State have shelved their shotguns and rifles for another year and will turn their attention to their winter pastimes, which will include weekend field trials for sporting dogs and hounds, trapshooting, indoor revolver and rifle-shooting and hikes in the rural regions observing the wintering of small game and training young dogs.

During the winter the various sportsman's associations will stage their annual meetings and banquets at which many discussions in reference to the past hunting seasons will be held. There is no doubt these discussions will include suggestions for changes in the game and fish codes. The state lawmakers will go into session at Harrisburg next month and the first measures to be laid on the desks of the solons will be in reference to changes or amendments to the sportsmen's regulations.

LAW CHANGES DUE

Rumors of new legislation concern the excessive posting of farm lands, providing for short-term leasing of farm lands during the small game season, November, for hunting purposes. When hostilities are opened for the repeal of the Sunday blue laws, the repeal is certain to include provisions for Sunday fishing. Representative Max Spann, of Allegheny County, who is to champion the repeal on the floor of the House favors Sunday fishing in this state just as it is permitted in Ohio. Already some sportsmen have declared their opposition to such a plan, but Spann intends to meet that opposition with a special Sunday limit catch clause in the open Sunday measure. This may be accomplished by a simple amendment of the fishing code.

OPPOSITION OUTNUMBERED

Those favorable to Sunday fishing outnumber the opposition in the state, and it is reasonable to hope that next summer the Western Pennsylvania anglers will not be required to journey into Ohio for Sunday fishing.

RANKIN MEETS SKIBO FROSH

By JULIUS LEVIN

The Rankin High School basketball team, coached by Jock Rosenberg, will be out to score its fourth straight victory tonight when the Carnegie Tech "B" team is met in a charity game on the Scott High School floor.

The Rankin quintet has not been extended in its pre-season contests to date, having defeated W. P. I. D., 30-14; Duquesne University Freshies, 32-25, and Central Catholic, 33-14.

The Rankin-Carnegie Tech "B" game heads another attractive list of pre-season contests in Western Pennsylvania tonight. While Rankin is using its home court, Scott High, under the coaching of Johnny Reed, invades Munhall to oppose Dick Toline's charges.

Scott High will be eager to make it five consecutive triumphs. Stowe, Avalon, Homestead and Erie Strong Vincent being the first four victims of the Reedmen.

Revenge will be the objective of the Mt. Lebanon High quintet when it meets Aliquippa in a return engagement at Mt. Lebanon tonight. The Lippemen defeated Mt. Lebanon in the first encounter, 36-18.

Aliquippa, after losing to its alumni aggregation, has scored three straight triumphs at the expense of Braddock, Beaver Falls and Mt. Lebanon.

Swissvale, defeated once in four pre-season contests, faces one of its toughest tests of the season tonight when Moe Rubenstein brings his Ambridge squad to Ed Paulie's domain. Ambridge is undefeated in two games, while Swissvale's only setback in four games was a 26-25 reversal at the hands of Duquesne, a team it beat earlier, 19-16.

Four City League members will see action in pre-season contests this afternoon. Allderdice goes to Connelley, while Allegheny is the attraction at Schenley. The latter game gives Allegheny an opportunity to make amends for its defeat in the post-season series by Schenley last season.

Business

Debt Liquidation Will Be Major Factor In Recovery

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE COUNTRY IS getting out of debt. This is a necessary step in progress toward business recovery. The completion of the process will mark the beginning of an era of increased purchasing power.

This factor in recovery has been mentioned by many bankers and industrial leaders during recent months. It refers to individuals as well as to corporations.

In the palmy days of 1928 and 1929 much of the sales which accounted for prosperity were being made entirely on borrowed money. At that time this condition was particularly true of individuals. Purchases on time had become the accepted mode of business. Income for many months in the future was mortgaged to provide for current purchases.

After the depression got under way and business started to decline, many leading corporations started to run into debt to banks to provide for the completion of improvement programs and to meet expenses as income began to slump.

Debts Are Now Being Paid Off

DURING THE LEAN years of depression, buying has been curtailed due to uncertainty. As a result, individuals and corporations, in spite of their reduced incomes, have been slowly getting out of debt. There has been less eagerness on the part of the individual to mortgage future income. The large corporations which owed money to banks have, through economies, been making steady progress in reducing their obligations.

The payment of principal and interest on debts out of reduced income has been a severe burden and has had a pronounced effect in reducing purchasing power. But when individuals and corporations do find themselves free of debt, they will again be in a position to buy. In the cases of both types of purchasers, many deferred needs will be filled. Purchases put off because of the pressure of circumstances finally will be made. The effect of this on business volume, which appears to have reached a natural bottom, may be quite pronounced.

Railroads Will Be Exceptions

THE RAILROADS appear to be the outstanding exception to progress made in reducing debts. The carriers, already burdened with an exceptionally heavy proportion of fixed interest charges in the years of prosperity, have only been saved from bankruptcy by additional assistance in the form of loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and from the Railroad Credit Corporation during the past year.

With the exception of this single major line of activity, which has increased indebtedness, both industry and individuals have been improving their liquid position during the depression period.

November was the first month since July that the trade figures have shown a decrease. In October the total exports were $14,470,000 more than November and the imports in October $1,500,000 more than in November.

For the 11 months of the present year there has been a favorable trade balance of $256,180,000 with $1,481,379,000 of exports and $1,225,199,000 of imports. The imports, however, were $758,841,000 less than for the same period of the previous year and the imports were $711,663,000 less.

STOCK MARKET REGAINS PART OF SETBACK

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The stock market suffered a moderate setback in the early trading today, but recouped some of its losses as the session wore on.

Professional traders were evidently somewhat discouraged by their failure to get a following on the upside in the previous session, and news of a character to provide important stimulus was still lacking.

American Telephone and American Tobacco "B" were weak spots, declining more than 2 points. Losses of 1 to 2 were sustained by Allied Chemical, American Can, Case, Corn Products, Consolidated Gas, National Biscuit, Public Service of New Jersey, Union Pacific and New York Central. Both common and preferred shares of United States Steel were down more than 1. Standard Oil of New Jersey, National Dairy Products, Pennsylvania and Montgomery Ward were steady. Southern Pacific, Harvester, du Pont and Loews yielded substantial fractions.

The apparent deadlock in the railroad wage parley at Chicago, and appointment of a receiver for the Central of Georgia Railway, may have been adverse influences upon the carrier shares.

Brokerage quarters continued, in the main, to favor the buying side of the market, but such buying as has been coming into the market has been in small amounts, and of a cautious character. Brokers with foreign connections said foreign buying had almost vanished, although it was understood there were some fair deposits of foreign funds in the New York banks, which might seek investment in American securities on real indications of business improvement.

Additional earning statements of railroads, presenting final figures for October operations, showed with only a few exceptions an improvement over October, 1931. The Baltimore and Ohio reported 72,804 carloadings for the first half of December, or 4,758 under the corresponding 1931 traffic movement, a decrease of only 6.5 per cent.

COTTON PRICES IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Cotton futures opened 1 lower to 4 higher on overnight trade buying. December, 5.93; January, 5.95; March, 6.09; May, 6.20; July, 6.31; October, 6.52.

The census report placing the ginning prior to December 13 at 12,085,648 bales appeared to be without effect on the market. The market showed a fairly steady undertone, and January at noon was ruling around 5.93c and May 6.18c, or net unchanged to 2 points lower.

After showing net gains of 3 or 4 points right after the call with January advancing to 5.98 and May to 6.22, the market eased off slightly. At the end of the first hour, liquidation continued and there was considerable switching from near to late months.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 20.—Cotton, 22,000 bales, including 13,200 American. Spot, moderate business done; prices 11 points lower; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 5.91; good middling, 5.61; strict middling, 5.36; middling, 5.21; strict low middling, 5.06; low middling, 4.91; strict good ordinary, 4.71; good ordinary, 4.41. Futures closed steady, December, 5.01; January, 5.01; March, 5.04; May, 5.06; July, 5.07; October, 5.09.

Central of Georgia In Receiver's Hands

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The Central of Georgia Railway Company was placed in the hands of a receiver yesterday under an order issued in Augusta by Judge William H. Barrett, of the United States District Court.

Wabash Railway Loadings Expand

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.—During the week ended December 17, the Wabash Railway handled 11,472 revenue freight cars, compared to 10,935 in the week preceding and 12,229 in the like 1931 week.

During the week ended December 17, the Rock Island Railway handled 17,597 revenue freight cars, compared with 19,098 in the preceding week and 22,574 in the like 1931 period.

INFLUX OF GOLD ENDS FIGHT ON DEFLATION

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—The large influx of gold into the United States, amounting to $570,000,000 since mid-June, gives the banking system a much stronger basis for organized effort against continued deflation.

The deflationary process, which deflates assets without reducing liabilities correspondingly, feeds on itself, and it must be fought through conscious effort. Early in the year, especially from April to June, the Federal Reserve System, making a counter deflationary gesture, increased their open market holdings of United States government obligations to the extent of $1,116,000,000 over the holdings in the corresponding period a year ago. However, during that same period the United States had been losing gold to the extent of $831,000,000, so that the bulk of the increase in open market holdings merely offset the loss of gold.

Mr. Rukeyser

CREDIT RELAXED

The full force of the power of the Federal Reserve to influence the situation in the direction of counter deflation could be tested under existing conditions, when we are actually gaining gold. Hoarding of bank notes too is an offsetting or deflationary influence, and to the extent that there has been a return flow of currency, credit has been relaxed.

Gustav Cassel, economist, in his newest book, "The Crisis in the World's Monetary System," contends that it is stupid for the United States to deflate with its huge gold reserves, though recognizing that some deflation has been unavoidable for countries that have been losing gold.

In alluding to hoarding, Mr. Cassel said:

"These notes, however, were hoarded by the general public who had lost their regular connections with the banks, or were under the impression that large holdings of bank notes were necessary for adequate liquidity. The principal element in the supply of means of payment, namely the deposits of the member banks with the Federal Reserve banks, had diminished during the course of the year by $398,000,000, and this diminution signified a very considerable restriction of the capacity of the private banks for supplying the general public with means of payment.

LARGER PURCHASE

"In order to check the deflation and restore the normal level of prices, the purchases of government securities by the Federal Reserve banks should have been on a far larger scale. The fact that no tangible results have as yet been gained does not in the least invalidate the efficacy of the method."

It seems to me, however, that hoarding and reluctance to turn over bank deposits at the normal rate are in part effects of the dislocation of industry, as well as causes of the trouble. To the extent that an equilibrium is restored by putting some of the unemployed to work and giving better buying power to the agricultural classes, these dislocations will automatically disappear. The hesitant and frightened will again begin to use their funds more freely as soon as their own economic outlook becomes clearer.

MONTOUR WINS COURT VICTORY

CLEVELAND, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—The Montour Railroad, racing against time to build a 13-mile line from the Youngstown steel district to the Ohio River, won another legal victory today, when it and other defendants were given until December 31 to answer an injunction suit brought by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

The extension was granted in federal court by Judge Paul Jones as the time expired today for the Montour, the Pittsburgh, Lisbon and Western Railroad and five other defendants to file an answer to the Pennsylvania's suit.

The Montour has been working day and night to rush completion of its line from Negley, O., to the Ohio River at Smith's Ferry, Pa. The Pennsylvania had asked an injunction to halt the construction on the ground the road had not obtained Interstate Commerce Commission approval.

The fight is the outgrowth of efforts to provide cheaper transportation from the steel district to the Ohio River.

MARY FAITH

By BEATRICE BURTON

Employer Surprises Mary Faith by Saying That He Loves Her

CHAPTER XI.

Kim and his girl were still looking at mesh bags when they left the store. Mary Faith did not glance in their direction as she passed them. She never had had a moment's curiosity about the girl who had taken Kim away from her.

It was ten minutes after five by the illuminated clock in the tower of the City Bank Building when she and Mark Nesbit again stepped out into the crowd of hurrying, last-minute shoppers on Spring street.

"I'm going to meet my mother at 6 and drive her home," he said as they turned west toward the garage. "So I'll have plenty of time to take you home first, Mary Faith. Unless you'd like to go somewhere and have some tea . . ."

"No, thanks." Food was the last thing that Mary Faith wanted at that moment. "But there's no need for you to drive me home, Mr. Nesbit. I can get a street car at the next corner."

"Well, I'd like to drive you home if you don't mind—I want to talk to you." He took her arm. "My mother would like you to come out to our house for Christmas. Judy's going to a matinee with some of the girls she goes to school with, and the Grants are going down to Washington for a week, so my mother and I will be alone. She'll probably call you up about it tonight."

CHRISTMAS ACTIVITIES

Mary Faith knew just what Christmas day would be like at Mrs. Puckett's. There would be little-pig sausages and wheat cakes for breakfast. Afterward Mr. McClintock would complain of indigestion and send Agnes flying for the baking-soda box. At 11 o'clock Mary Faith would go to church and that would be lovely—mistletoe and holly on the walls, candles flickering, the choir-boys singing "O, Come All Ye Faithful" that always made her heart swell and a lump come into her throat.

There would be a four-course dinner at Mrs. Puckett's at two o'clock, and later on Mrs. Puckett would fall asleep with a newspaper over her face while the Brock girls and Miss Halperin and Mary Faith played auction bridge before the fire.

At seven o'clock there would be a cold supper in the dining room and people would come in from the neighborhood to eat, as they always did on Sundays and holidays. At ten o'clock Mary Faith would go upstairs to bed; and Christmas, "the gladdest day of all the year," would be over for her.

"It's lovely of your mother to want me—" she said slowly, racking her brains for an excuse to give him for not accepting the invitation. She didn't want to accept it. It was one thing to go out to the house in Blue Valley as a secretary and quite another thing to spend the day there as a guest. "But I don't believe I can go. You see, Mrs. Puckett's a sort of second-mother to me, and I always spend Christmas with her," she went on.

A STARTLING CONFESSION

"You spend every day in the year with Mrs. Puckett."

"I spend every day in the week with you in your office, Mr. Nesbit——"

"I don't want you in my office" he interrupted her sharply. He swung her to one side of the wet, crowded pavement and stopped before an enormous shop window filled with Christmas toys.

"I seem to have picked a funny place to talk to you like this," he said awkwardly. "Mary Faith, don't you know I'm in love with you? My mother does. She spotted it the first day you came out to the house—"

Synopsis

Mary Faith is secretary to Mark Nesbit, wealthy, young businessman. She informs Mark that she is leaving her position to marry Kimberley Farrell, young lawyer, to whom she has been engaged for some time. Invited to Kim's house for dinner, Mary Faith is greeted coldly by his mother. Later, Kim startles Mary Faith by breaking his engagement and asking for the ring. The next morning, Mary Faith informs her co-workers that she is not to be married. Slowly Mary Faith learns to live her life without Kim. When Mark Nesbit injures his ankle, Mary Faith is driven to his country home to take dictation. She meets his mother and enjoys the charming home life of the Nesbits. Mary Faith sees Kim in a store with another girl. She greets him casually.

Now Go On

"Oh, don't!" Mary Faith was shaking her head. "Please don't go on talking like this—"

"You don't care for me, Mary Faith?"

"Oh, yes. But wait—" She wanted to tell him that she did care for him; that she cared for his friendship and wanted to keep it . . . And she wanted to stop him before he asked her to marry him.

"I have been waiting," he said, quietly persistent. "I've known I felt this way about you ever since that night last fall when you told me you were going to be married. I must have been in love with you long before that, without realizing it. When you came in the next morning and said you'd broken your engagement it was like giving me a new lease on life . ."

EXPLAINS ABOUT KIM

"Wait just a minute, please," Mary Faith interrupted him. "I didn't break my engagement. I let you and everybody else think that I did—to save my face." She caught her breath and went on: "The man I was going to marry broke it. He was in love with another girl and he came and told me so . . . He was the man who spoke to me in Armbruster's just now. The girl was with him. At least, I suppose it was the girl."

Kim had thrown her aside like a book that he had finished reading, and she wanted Mark Nesbit to know it. It was only fair to tell him the truth.

"I'll never give the snap of my finger for anyone again—in that way," she said. "I must have given him all the love I had to give anybody."

They walked on in silence. And in silence they got into the gray car and started for Mrs. Puckett's. When they were halfway there Mark Nesbit spoke again.

"You're very young to look at things like this, Mary Faith. One love affair that turned out badly isn't the whole show. You have a long life ahead of you, and you've got to live it. You've seen a good deal of me the last two weeks, and you've seemed to be very happy. You do like me, don't you?"

"I wish I could tell you how much I like you," she said; "but I don't feel about you as I did about Kim."

"I like him now," she thought. "But if I married him I'd probably stop liking him. I'd grow to hate him because he wasn't Kim."

There was a rich smell of vegetable soup in Mrs. Puckett's house that night. Mr. McClintock was walking up and down the hall when Mary Faith came in, waiting for Agnes to throw open the dining room doors. He lived from one meal to the next.

Miss Halperin came flying down the stairs and called for Mrs. Puckett. "Allie Brock has been taking a bath in that bathroom for one solid hour!" she complained bitterly. "And here I am, waiting to get dressed to go out to a dinner date. . . . Now, what am I going to do?"

"Mary Faith, don't you know I'm in love with you?"

Mrs. Puckett looked appealingly at Mary Faith. "She can use your washbowl, can't she, dearie?" she asked. "You don't mind, do you?"

Mary Faith did mind. She minded very much. But she opened her handbag and gave Miss Halperin the key to her room.

"Dinner will be ready in just a minute, anyway." Mrs. Puckett drew her into the parlor. "You'd only have to run 'way up to your room and straight down again . . . Was that Mr. Nesbit who brought you home just now?"

"Yes." Mary Faith took off her tight little hat and shoved the heavy hair back from her forehead.

"Well, it's getting to be quite a romance, isn't it?"

Mary Faith shook her head. "No, and it's never going to be a romance." All at once she found Mrs. Puckett's archness too heavy to be borne. "I stopped working for him today."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

"Mickey Mouse," that famous character of the screen and the comic strips, which also appears every day in the Sun-Telegraph comic pages, shared honors with several vaudeville acts at the meeting of the Memorial Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club Saturday.

A complete "Mickey Mouse" revue was presented by the pupils of the Dravosburg School. Those taking part were: Ruth Ashman, Alice Fallquist, James Brown, Lois Cumpson, Grace Stoops, Phyllis Teets, Anna Hughes, Jean Davis, June Hilliard, Doris Krchell, Fay Kaufman and Jean Abels.

New members joining the McKeesport Chapter of the Junior Komic Club during the week were: Louise Grinna, 743 Jenny Lind street; Marjorie Grivna, 317 Hickory street; Robert De Ruse, 3400 Cleveland street; Clestyal De Ruse, 2405 Cleveland street; Rita Mae Crosier, 224 Church street; Jessie Rosnick, 2401 Corsin street, all of McKeesport.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

The big Christmas party which all of the members have been looking forward to for some time is rapidly drawing closer. Only four days remain until Santa will return to each boy and girl the stockings they brought to the meetings about six weeks ago. Each of these stockings will be filled with candy, toys, fruit and other good things to eat. All of the theaters will have a big tree lighted and decorated from which Santa will make his distribution.

It's going to be a great party and every youngster is urged to be at the theater early so as not to miss any of the fun. The doors of the theaters will open at the usual time and the meetings will be called to order immediately. If you have some friends visiting you from out-of-town, bring them along because the more the merrier.

Here's a suggestion to the members of the Junior Komic Club. If you have a "pal" who is not a member of the club, why not get him a membership card and button for Christmas? Just bring his or her name and address, name of the parents, date and year of birth, school they attend; give all this information to the manager of the theater and he will give you a membership card and button, which you can present to your "pal" on Christmas morning.

We Don't Want Anything Useful

Less than five days to Christmas and all the shopping we've done so far is a promise and a lick.

It's the season of peace on earth and retaliation to relatives. And that's wrong. A gift should be more than something in a bundle. You should send with it your deepest love and the most elusive reciprocation.

Even a disabled and veteran floor lamp can be made a thing of beauty if forwarded with sentimental reflexes and postage prepaid. Wrap it tenderly in tinfoil, put on a layer of cellophane, smother it in excelsior, coddle it in green paper, garnish it with a string and then wave it three times around your head while yelling the good old Yuletide carol "Here it comes, ready or not."

There's too much of this hooray-for-our-side business in the exchange of presents. There is a minimum of gratitude and a preponderance of glaring at price tags.

The reason most of us give like mice is because we have memories like elephants. What did Cousin Ella give us last year? Why, a pocket lighter that was a new form of portable cremation. It exploded on the third day and blew the buttons off the adjacent haberdashery.

Therefore, Cousin Ella gets a present that will teach her a lesson. She gets a celluloid curling iron with 20 feet of wire and a floor plug. She'll have a merry Christmas if it doesn't get there until the new year.

Now, my friends, that's all incorrect. It is better to give nothing at all than to donate in the spirit of international reparations. Why, a man who would send a gift like that is the kind of renegade who would give a child something useful.

That's what we wanted to say. We hope we don't get anything useful. Don't allow the utilitarian to triumph over the exotic and the rare. Shall the material transcend the spiritual and shall the sordid wallow the whiskers off the poetic?

We don't want anything useful. A toy, a balloon or some stocks and bonds are fine. But nothing useful.

Send a stuffed moosehead hatrack and we will guarantee its feed bill. But if you give us a self-choking necktie or a pair of carpet slippers we will resent it with every fiber in our breakfast grapefruit. We are in the prime of our second childhood and we want toys.

Frisby Launches Big Campaign To SWAT THE MOUSE!

WASHINGTON MONUMENT —A strong, silent man is preparing to startle the nation with statistics. Horace Walpole Frisby, Congressman-at-large, says the foundations of the republic are being nibbled and gnawed by the ordinary home and field mouse, which does $5,000 worth of damage every minute. "As this is exactly the rate that the nation's deficit increases," argues Frisby, "I have hit upon a way to balance the budget — a program as simple as arithmetic itself. My plan is to do away with the tiny rodent, and thus balance the books as quick as a flash. A few years ago I eliminated the house fly with the slogan: 'Swat the fly!'

"Now I hope all partisan politics will be laid to one side in a great national response to my plea to balance the budget by adopting my newest slogan, 'Swat the Rodent Domestica!' Thank you, America. I'm mighty proud to be your leader."

Candidly, Sir or Madame Bella, do you think this great nation can achieve the goal of temperance by putting the government in the liquor business?

Wilful Defiance

The City Administration's Delay in Establishing the New Tag System is Inexcusable

Councilman P. J. McArdle's protest against the delay in putting into effect the new system of "non-fixable" traffic tags was none too strong.

It looks as if the administration were wilfully defying public sentiment on this subject. Certainly there is no excuse for the delay.

For years the citizens of Pittsburgh have been complaining about the favoritism shown in the treatment of cases of violation of the traffic regulations. Persons with influence, when summoned to Traffic Court for infraction of the automobile ordinances, could easily get their tags "fixed"—that is, get the summons annulled—through the intervention of a councilman, Republican ward chairman, or other politician.

It is estimated that 200,000 such cases have been "fixed" annually in recent years and that the city has lost at the very least $200,000 a year that could have been collected in fines if the offenders had been made to answer for their offenses.

Public clamor at last forced Council to adopt the new system of "non-fixable" tags; but although the ordinance became effective on April 7, when Mayor Charles H. Kline signed it, the traffic violator is still receiving the old "fixable" tags.

Various branches of the city government blame each other for the delay. Their excuses are neither interesting nor important. If the administration had cared to put the new system into effect promptly it would have been put into effect.

Beautiful Words

The Meaning Rather Than the Sound Appears to Influence Pittsburghers' Judgment.

Words may be beautiful because of their sound or because of their meaning.

The Pittsburghers engaged in the current pastime of choosing the 10 most beautiful words in the English language are influenced more by the meaning than by the sound, to judge from the lists that have been printed in the Sun-Telegraph.

There are words like "filthy" and "nicotine" which are so pleasant in sound that they might be girls' names, but few think of their phonetic attractiveness, because it is overshadowed by the disagreeable significance.

There are some words in which there appears to be a connection between the sound and the meaning. For example, words beginning with "sn" seem, for the most part, to suggest something unpleasant, as "snake," "snag," "snare," "snarl," "snatch," "sneak," "sneer," "snivel," "snob," "snore," "snort," "snout" and "snub." But this is exceptional.

The same of choosing beautiful words, by calling attention to the fact that beauty of sound has nothing to do with beauty of meaning, may also emphasize the lesson that in human beings as well as in words "handsome is that handsome does."

Short Session Pledged

The Legislature Will Confer a Favor If It Transacts Its Business Quickly.

The General Assembly will convene in Harrisburg on January 3 for its one hundred and thirtieth regular session.

In the ordinary course of affairs, after organizing by electing presiding and other officers, both the Senate and the House of Representatives would adjourn until later in the month. In the meanwhile the presiding officers would select the members of standing committees.

But the Legislative leaders have agreed to dispense with the recess this time, and the Republican state organization has pledged its efforts to keep the session short.

Pennsylvanians will appreciate a short session. We have already had two special sessions, as well as one previous regular session, during the present term of Gov. Gifford Pinchot, and there is no need for another prolonged meeting.

Rehabilitation Projects

Chairman Robertson, of the National Committee, Makes a Cheering Report.

The National Committee on Industrial Rehabilitation is getting action. A Pittsburgher, A. W. Robertson, is chairman, and under his leadership numerous great corporations have been induced to start rebuilding and repairing their plants, with a view to providing work for unemployed men and also that they may be in condition to operate in full blast when business conditions become normal.

That was a cheering report which came from Mr. Robertson yesterday. Rehabilitation projects which will involve a total expenditure of $105,266,429 will be under way throughout the country on January 1.

The Fourth Federal Reserve District, including Pittsburgh, has pledged projects entailing an expenditure of $8,041,000.

Fine! But there are many local companies which could help to make the amount larger, and it is to be hoped they will earnestly consider if it would not be to their advantage to do so.

A Friend of the Birds

John M. Phillips Never Forgets Them When Deep Snow Covers the Ground.

In addition to his other titles of distinction John M. Phillips might lay claim to consideration as ambassador of the birds.

He can always be depended upon, when they are in need, to bear a message from them to the people of this community, appealing for help.

For years and years, within a few days after every heavy snowfall, Mr. Phillips has made it a practice to call upon the city editors and editorial writers of the newspapers to say something about the desirability of putting out feed for the game and song birds.

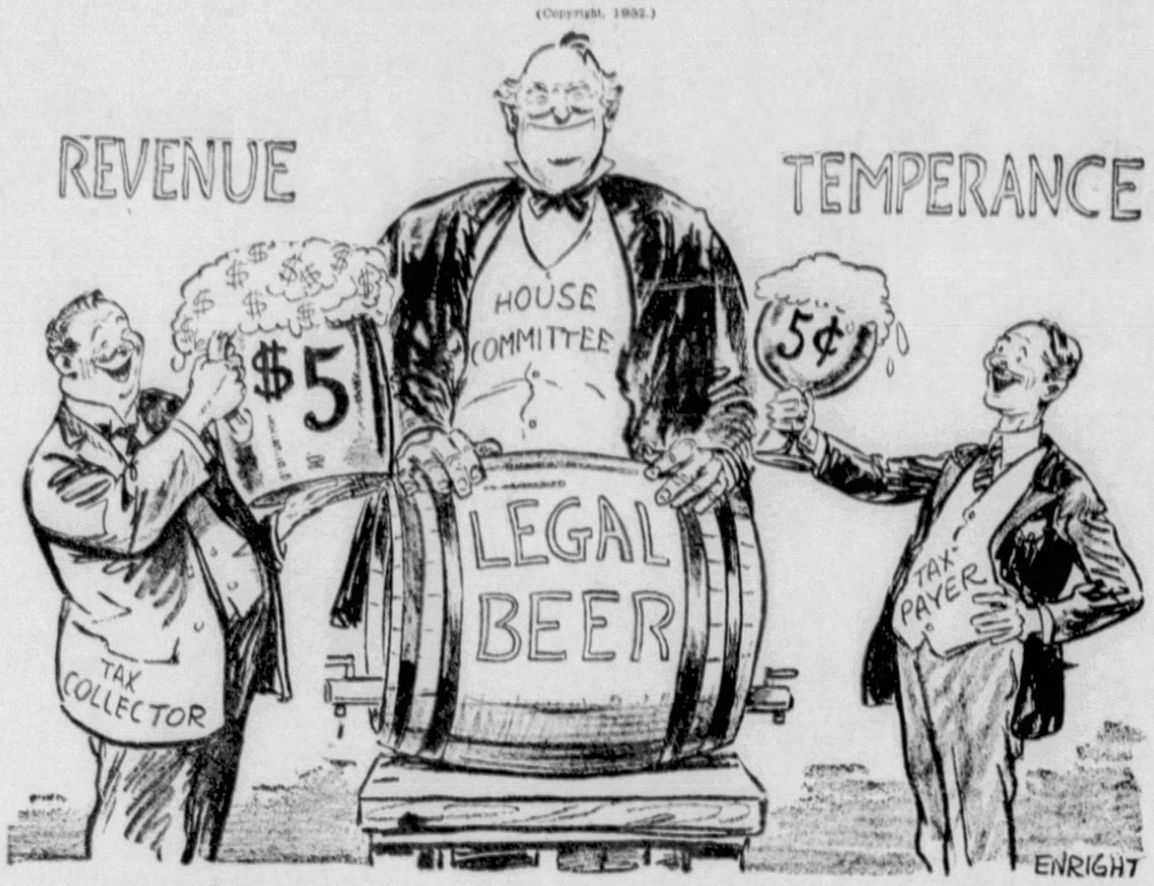
He reports that the quail are having a hard time of it just now because they are shut off by the snow from their ordinary sources of food supply in the woods and fields. Cracked grain such as is fed chicks should be placed where they can easily find it. Mr. Phillips suggests, too, that food may be placed in corn shocks, which will provide the quail shelter.

If you live in the suburbs, it is a good plan to put up a feeding station for birds and keep it supplied through the winter with cracked corn and small grain, suet, bread crumbs and the like.

You will be rewarded in the pleasure you will get from watching the juncos, titmice, chickadees, cardinals and other feathered visitors that will be attracted.

Out of the Same Barrel

(Copyright, 1932.)



The tax collector wears a grin
Around his thirsty gills,
He sees the money rolling in
To pay the nation's bills.
The man who pays the taxes, too,
Can feel his tonsils throb.
He smiles to think of foaming brew
Returning to the job.

The gangster and the racketeer
Are trembling fore and aft
Because they fear that legal beer
Will wreck their easy graft.
The beer of old will break the hold
Of whisky's fiery spell,
For amber brew spells Revenue
And Temperance as well.

Anarchy in the Coal Industry

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

It must be a source of gratification to all Americans that the default of France has not called forth bitter denunciations from American statesmen in Washington. All we asked was that an agreement be kept—an agreement that easily could have been kept. It has been refused in a deluge of abuse of the American people, without whose aid, some years ago, France would have gone under.

The dignified manner in which the default has been met here is as it should be. We are not going to rattle any swords; we are not going to collect these debts by force; but we are not going to be bulldozed, however, into a voluntary sacrifice of American interests. France has preferred the position of a defaulting nation and that necessarily will ultimately hurt her more than the transfer of her burdens to our people will hurt us. Meanwhile it is probable that self-respecting Americans, planning their summer vacations across the sea, will take cognizance of their unpopularity in France and become better acquainted with England, Germany and Italy.

In the case of Belgium we learn that it was Georges Theunis who insisted upon default there—on the ground that Belgium owes us nothing she is under obligations of honor to pay. That, too, is interesting.

Meanwhile Italy, and especially England, have made many friends in this country.

The Result Is Ruin

It is just as well to let the debts ride for a while, since a new administration somes in soon. We have problems of a pressing sort here at home. Something must be done for agriculture, and something is planned—something new, and in some ways drastic. And something must be done if the great coal industry of America is not to collapse utterly. Just now it is practically ruined. The operators are not making any money; vast numbers of mine workers are out of work; the whole industry, one of the greatest not long ago, is in a state of chaos.

During the war, when there was an abnormal demand for coal, the mines were urged to produce to their utmost capacity, and they did. Because of the abnormal demand, everyone who had a little coal on his land opened a new mine, and during the period of the war made money. Because of the unusual activity in the industry great numbers of young men became miners with the thought of making that their life work.

Then, with the close of the war, the demand for coal fell enormously; and we found in the overproduction that we had too many mines, too many miners. The operators entered into a cut-throat competition to live—barely to live. The result is ruin—a veritable state of anarchy in one of the nation's greatest industries.

Divided Against Themselves

Much could have been done by the industry itself to save itself, but jealousies and greed have made concerted action among the operators seemingly impossible. There is too much of that unrestrained "individualism" to which Mr. Hoover referred in his message. Self regulation to end wanton waste seems an utter impossibility after all these years of trial. Whenever any suggestion has been made that the nation step in for the purpose of regulation, the operators indignantly have scouted the idea and announced their ability to regulate their own business.

And we now know that they can do nothing of the sort. They have had years now in which to attempt self-regulation and nothing has been done, and nothing even attempted, that has offered any hope.

So the industry is about prostrate, and coal is being produced for sale at prices ruinous to miner and operator alike.

Time and again the President has been urged to assume a leadership in the attempt at stabilization by calling a conference, but always the operators have resented the suggestion of "interference." They are divided against themselves. And in the meantime a great industry, operating in 30 states, is stumbling toward utter ruin in the dark.

A Bill Pending In Congress

A bill sponsored by the United Mine Workers is now pending in Congress. We do not pretend to pass judgment upon it. It may have fatal weaknesses. It must have some virtues. It should have early and careful consideration, if for no other reason than to concentrate attention upon a serious national problem and to get something started. It does not go so far as to propose that coal be made a public utility subject to regulation. It is conservative, perhaps too conservative.

But it is a beginning toward that stabilization of the coal industry, and somehow this must be brought about.

In no other great nation would a great industry such as this be permitted to drift to utter ruin and fall into a state of complete anarchy without even attracting the serious attention of government; for the interest of the entire public is involved.

When billions invested in an industry pay no dividends, and hundreds of thousands of workers in an industry are reduced in cut-throat competition to the wages of pauperism, or are made objects of charity, it is time for organized society to interest itself.

The Times Call For Leadership

Our trouble is that we have too many people today who imagine that the unrestrained "individualism" of pre-panic days can be restored. It cannot. We are in the midst of a social and economic evolution, very similar, as Dr. Ely, the economist, points out, to those in which other civilizations have collapsed. The old formulas will not fit the present necessities. We are where we are—fighting everywhere against ruin—because of the old methods—and we cannot go back to them or retain them without tragedy.

The times call for a leadership with the initiative, the courage, yes, even the audacity, to seek and put new methods in practice, to find new formulas for an entirely new age.

Unless we get this leadership, unless we find these new methods, unless we adopt these new formulas we face a future, not remote, that will be dark enough. We cannot fold our hands and wait. Necessarily all this must mean the harnessing and control of human greed; a reasonable subordination of the individual to the imperative needs of society.

No Time to Be Lost

There are numerous changes in policy that may be made within the old system. There are some that mean the breaking of new ground, or the breaking with old traditions.

Thus the coal industry cannot be stabilized and saved unless we go beyond the old methods; and agriculture cannot be saved without it; and the problems of the machine age, as they relate to the workers, cannot be solved without it. It is not enough to save the banks; we must save humanity.

And there is no time to be lost. Congress should lose no time in beginning the consideration in committees of the pending bill for the stabilization of the coal industry.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

What Women Don't Tell

The meanest practical joke that a woman can play on a man, says the Cynic, is to get him so dizzy that he can't see where he's going—and then lead him to the altar and marry him.

When a man begins trying to tell you what love is, it's a sign that some girl has him so dizzied that you can't rely on a word he says.

The man who marries for money seems to realize that going through the wedding ceremony is merely signing up for the job—the office hours and discipline will begin later.

The marriageable age of a woman used to be from 18 to 30—now it's from 16 'til death.

The gossip-column writers could probably tell the world hundreds of things about devoted lovers and happily married couples, if they chose—but who in the world would pay three cents to read it?

When we speak of a man of 49 as "going on 50," and of a woman of the same age as "over 40"—that's real chivalry.

Speaking of the return of beer—it will be easier for a woman to enjoy the radio while waiting for her husband to come home evenings, if she can picture him snuggling up to a glass of beer and a pretzel than it was when she visioned him making eyes at a blonde in a speakeasy.

It is a popular tradition that every man is looking for a nice, sweet domestic girl who wants to be "somebody's wife"—but, oh how they "shy" when you offer to introduce them to that kind!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

With Song

With song she came through woodlands green,
With carols clear and gay,
Her heart as joyous as the scene
That April day.

Akin to lark and thrush she seemed,
A dryad drunk with sound,
Her blithe steps rhymed, her footfall gleamed
Along the ground!!

The world was very sweet with spring
And she with youth was sweet;
In tune with primrose blossoming
Her pulses beat.

With silver song upon her lips
As glad as song was she
Who launched me out on dreams' swift ships
To Arcady.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Nowhere, outside the fierce milieu of Times Square, is there a livelier joust to life than along the produce market on enormously wide West street. It stretches in haphazard warrens of two and three-storied brick houses with projecting wooden awnings.

Thinly crated grapes and grape fruit, and sacks of onions and carrots overflow the sidewalk, with pyramids of cabbages sometimes collapsing in the gutter. So packed is the pavement tumble, passersby must zig-zag through tiny footpaths. Also, the perpetual shuffle of drolls and vagabonds.

Here and there, in punctuating glitter, are bright-lit, initialed lunchrooms where world-weary cockroaches entomb themselves in mustard. And husky roustabouts, coatless and hatted, gulp stews and hefty hamburgers. All about is the jungly pungency of fruit, bursting with fragrance.

Between truck loads, handlers pitch ball in the street or snooze in various nooks. Gin peddlers hawk swigs from the hip. It is about the only section of New York where architecture rarely changes. There still are green-shuttered rustic inns with front parlors in lump gilt and red plush.

At doorsteps are dark docks with ships looming suddenly, like cliffs. Mingled with the effluvia of fruit is the tang of hemp and tar. Around dawn is the most strident jangle, when motor trucks arrive and the tangle of shipping unwinds into its steady caravan, uptown.

The most magnificent spire in the squat of West street is the New York Telephone Building. On its south is something of a porticoed and heavy pillared rue de Rivoli, lined with dwarfed shops, scoured bright, in the Parisian manner.

Because of its porched protection, West street is the haunt of dog owners airing kiyoodles in the rain. I thought it a personal discovery until a recent drenched midnight, I found at least a dozen—including Grace Moore—with the same idea. The only objectors are cats, spitting in arched indignation from every doorway. As Rainbow isn't a fraidy and Billy cannot hear, it doesn't matter.

* * *

Nothing is more stimulating than a shipping district when the rising sun, like a tocsin, calls workers to toil. In sudden hive-like eruption, men become busy with ropes, boxes, hammers and cranes. An overalled fellow, in a swinging cradle, yawns to his co-workers: "I seen Bankhead last night. She's a darb," and begins painting a hull. Another calls: "I got a smacker on the third at Pimlico," and swings a heavy spike. For slug-a-beds, who arise atwitter about trifles, the genial to-and-fro is almost adventure shrilling a golden lute.

* * *

The most depressing street downtown, to me, is Fulton, particularly at the Broadway corner. In a newspaper shop in this area, I spent the unhappiest cycle of life. Now, years afterward, I avoid it as some plague patch. In varied catch-holds at migratory journalism, it was, by odds, the most unfriendly haven and I hailed its demise with grisly chuckle. The balm of Gilead was that I met there three of the finest men I know—Rube Goldberg, Grantland Rice and Homer Davenport.

* * *

Vesey street, across St. Paul's from Fulton, reflected none of the morbid nuances of Fulton. During the lunch hour, I would idle there, and reaching it was like stepping from darkness into light. Building facades were dazzled in shavings of sunbeams. There was one delightful botique offering surcease from slim-pursed despair. For a dime one could buy paper-backed shockers such as "The Stranglers of rue Lepic." In dispirited moments, I can, to this day, lose myself in the fidgety horror of penny dreadfuls.

* * *

And then there was Old Mary, shawled apple woman to Russell Sage, whose noon basket was a luscious trove. In all New York, she was the only soul to extend me credit.

This has been one of those inspirationless days, when a feeling of martyrdom incites a temptation to emulate the ancients—don the hair shirt, roam the hills, exist on berries and nuts and let everything go womp! Eight days overdue with a magazine piece, three days in syndicated arrears, I moaned to my wife: "I don't believe I can go on." And to show you how much attention people pay to what I say around this house, she chirped brightly: "Why not wait and go tomorrow?"

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

A changing world. New ways of working. New ways of thinking. I wondered how many of us would be able to adjust ourselves to that new world. Now someone writes:

"I admit there's a new world coming, but I hope I never live to see it if it's like you say. How can you say that we will have new ideas of right and wrong? Right and wrong never change. Right is always right. It is the one thing we are sure of. Writers like you do a lot of harm, setting people wondering about such things."

So you don't like the notion that morals wobble, stranger? I agree, it is a bit upsetting. But facts are facts. Don't quarrel with me about 'em; read your history. Somewhere, sometime, we humans may find a permanent standard of goodness—but we certainly haven't discovered it yet. So far, our rules of right and wrong have changed almost as often as our fashions.

It was "right" in Biblical times for a father to stone an impertinent child to death, or to abandon on the desert a wife of whom he had tired.

It was "right" in the early days of the Christian church for a godly man to cut off his servant's ears or throw him into a dungeon for life for some petty misdemeanor.

It was "right," in our own country, for a man to own slaves, and to sell the children of those slaves away from their parents.

It was "right," no longer ago than 50 years, for an American father to will away his unborn babe from the mother; for a husband to beat his wife, "provided the stick be no thicker than his thumb;" for a man to shelter his mistress under the same roof as his wife, the wife being denied the privilege of divorce. And, in some of our states, these laws still stand upon the books.

It is "right" today in certain parts of America for a parent to give a little girl of twelve in marriage, or a boy of fourteen.

It is "right," today, for American parents to force little children of six, eight and ten to work in factories and mines, mills and fields—and every day tens of thousands of little children go to such labor.

It is "right" in any state in America for a parent to beat a little child of any age, with any available instrument, provided he or she does not actually maim or kill that child.

It is "right" for American jailers to lash men to cross beams and flog their flesh to bloody strips—to torture them in sweat boxes—to hang them up by the hands until their kidneys rupture from the strain of dragging flesh—to strap them in chairs and burn them to death—to strangle them—to lock them in pitch dark isolation until their brains crack.

It is "right" to employ girls in sweat shops at wages of two or three dollars a week.

Every one of these, and countless equally abominable acts, were and are held to be "right." They were done and are being done today by "respectable, God-fearing men and women." AND YOU AND I ARE PUTTING OUR LEGAL SANCTION ON THEM.

Also, in our private lives, we decide that it is "right" to indulge in endless malice, dishonesty, intolerance, selfishness, conceit and criminal silliness—all in the name of godliness!

An unchanging standard of goodness? Actually, there's no more shifty or cussed institution on earth than human morality. The Devil himself never pulled dirtier deals than those which have been and are being committed in the name of righteousness.

It has been said that "man builds his God as he goes." You may doubt that, but this is sure—man builds his UNDERSTANDING OF GOD as he goes.

We aren't born with an understanding of goodness. We cannot acquire it by some spiritual miracle, nor can anyone teach it to us. We must achieve the knowledge of goodness as we achieve all other wisdom—by slow growth and personal, hard labor.

The standard of right? It's as tall as our brain, as wide as our heart, as strong as our courage, as generous as our imagination.

How much God have you? As much as you use.

Isn't It So?

After looking into the same mirror for 30 years a woman begins to lose faith in it.

One advantage of voting for the loser is that one doesn't have to make apologies at the end of the term.

One of two things always inspires a woman when she boasts about her husband: Either she's proud of him or trying to camouflage her shame of him.
